PREFACE

Some years ago when I began to feel that I would like to learn who my ancestors were farther back than my grandfather, I made some inquiries among my relatives as to what they knew concerning them. The best I could do was to learn my great-grandfathers name, beyond which was oblivion. Consequently, it was about two years before I was able to learn my line of descent and trace to my immigrant ancestor. At that time, little did I dream that eventually I should voluntarily assume the responsibility of editing a genealogy of the Todd Family, but as I worked into the matter, deeper and yet deeper, I could not learn of but just one person who had ever attempted to collect a record of the descendants of Christopher Todd as a whole, and he had recently died in the harness, leaving his data unpublished. I then negotiated with his heirs and soon thereafter, all the material that he had been years in collecting, came into my possession. Since then I have attempted to complete more of the branches to the present time.

The result is now soon to be placed before the Todd Family for their inspection and perusual. My principle reason for this action is to preserve from absolute destruction the data which has been years in preparing and with such infinite labor and zeal.

However, the task has not been wholly without its compensations, as I have become somewhat acquainted with many people, who, otherwise I never should have known, and have become personally acquainted with a number of them. I have had many willing assistants who have given me valuable help and information concerning their particular branches of the family, and with such I shall always retain very pleasant memories. On the other hand, there are those who have not been enough interested in their ancestry to furnish me with information which was in their possession. Unfortunately, these are the very ones whose records will appear the most incomplete, which has given me much keen disappointment and it necessarily follows that those who have sent me the required information and have answered my inquiries, will appear much nearer complete and to date. It has been my ambition to complete every branch which has living descendants, but alas, I have failed.

The foundation to this work was begun many years ago by the late Rev. John E. Todd formerly of New Haven, Conn., who did a vast amount of work in collecting the records, especially of the earlier generations contained herein. It is impossible to specify all to whom I am indebted for assistance rendered me in my part of completing this work. To all these, I wish to express my thanks, and that I appreciate all they have done for me.

I do not claim this work to be perfect; no doubt there are many errors, which, perhaps came about largely through transmission. When such imperfections are discovered I would be pleased to have the corrections or additions sent to me, as sooner or later a supplement may be required.

This work is planned so that each generation is finished before the next one begins. Each person is numbered in rotation beginning with Christopher as 1. His oldest child is numbered 2, the next 3 and the last one is 7 which completes the first generation. Each person who has descendants, an * is placed before their number thus, *2, which denotes that the number will appear in the succeeding generation in its proper place, the number then appearing in the middle of the page, otherwise, all that is known of that particular person will be found when their number first appears.

INTRODUCTION

Tod is the Scotch word for fox. In Scotland and the north of England a todhunter is a fox hunter. The name Todd is an altered form of the Scotch word tod. The shorter form of the name is therefore the original and correct one. The doubling of the final letter is a corruption. But at the present time everywhere unless in Scotland and perhaps even there too, the corrupt form is the more common one.

The first to assume the word as a surname was perhaps a keen sportsman. He followed the hounds, or may have been a fox hunter. Tod is a name occurring in the writings of Wycliffe, also Todman. We have other forms of the name, Todt or Todte and Todde, also the compounds Todcastle, Todenham and Todlebru.

A good story is told of a market gardener of Middlesex, who was brought before a magistrate for not having printed on his cart his name, his place of residence and the words "taxed cart." In defence, the gardener said that he had complied with the law in every particular, as the Court could judge from inspection of his cart, upon which was the following legend:

"A Most Odd Act on a Taxed Cart."

This looked startling, not to say contumacious, until it was explained that it could be rendered:

"Amos Todd, Acton, a Taxed Cart."

Among those who have helped to make the name illustrious, to mention but a few, one of the best known Irish scholars of his day—he was born in 1805—was James Henthorn Todd, consulted both by statesmen and theologians. Another was Henry John Todd who was editor of Milton; he also edited Johnson's dictionary, and added several thousand words. Robert Bentley Todd, the early part of the nineteenth century, was a physician of high repute, and his statue may be seen at King's College Hospital. David Todd had a world-wide reputation as an astronomer. Isaac Todhunter was a mathematician, whose treatises had an enormous circulation.

Shall we also mention Mary Evans Todd, the "Mary" of Coleridge's verse? She was not a Todd by birth, to be sure, but the wife of one and the mother of another—the mother of Elliott D' Arcy Todd, of Yorkshire, which for centuries has been the stronghold, so to speak, of the Todds. Can there be any connection between the name of the family and the town in the West Riding of Yorkshire—Todmorden? The town also dates back to Edward III, and even prior to his reign.

In "Women of the Revolution" we read of Sarah, Adam Todd's wife. Their home was in Cliff Street, New York. When the British took possession of the city she left it, but quickly returned when she heard that a servant which she had left in charge of her house was passing herself off as the mistress and was taking boarders. She remained through the war, and with her daughters, was a ministering angel to prisoners and the wounded in hospitals. One of the latter had taken up its quarters in the Quaker Meeting House which was next door north of her house, in Queen street, and was used as a prison hospital during the war, and she often went in to cook for and nurse the sick. Her house was called "rebel headquarters" by the British, and an officer said of her and her daughters: "They are the d—Rebels in New York."

The men too played their part and played it well. Timothy Todd, of Vermont, a surgeon, was at the battle of Bennington and a member of the Governor's council, and several other of the Todd descendants of Christopher served during the war. Thomas Todd, of Virginia, was also a member of the Continental army; his son Charles was one of the four aides who rendered Gen. Harrison most important services during his campaign and was afterward minister to Russia. The Kentucky branch of Todd family also has its war record. There were Lieut. Levi and his brother, Col. John, good and brave soldiers. Levi was the father of Robert, the father of Mrs. Abraham Lincoln.

All the Todds have originally come from Scotland; but they have come by different roads, and some of them have been a long time on the way. For centuries, driven by persecution or lured by the hope of advantage, they have been with their fellow-countrymen, descending into England, or crossing the straits into the North of Ireland.

For three or four hundred years the parish registers in all the counties of England have contained many records of Todds. An ancient Yorkshire register records the marriage of Richard Tod and Mary Wod. This is poetic and beautiful. In such a family it must have been natural for the boys, when first learning to walk, to toddle, and for the girls, when old and fat, to waddle.

With the practical union of Scotland and England under James I, the mutual political prejudices of the two countries began to abate. With the reformation in England and later the spread of independency and Presbyterianism their religious prejudices also disappeared. And the Scotch in England were mingled everywhere with the English. Consequently the two peoples became thoroughly amalgamated. The Todds in England have long since become thoroughly English and have lost the last trace of their Scottish heredity. With the Scotch in Ireland, or the Scotch-Irish as they are commonly but improperly called, the case is very different. There the Scotch have been segregated from the Irish, in a few Northern Counties; they have been strong advocates of William of Orange, and the protestant succession, while the Irish have been loyal to the Stuarts, so long as there were any to be loyal to, and since that to home-rule, or anything rather than the established government, and the Irish have been bigoted Roman Catholics, while the Scotch have been not less bigoted Presbyterians. From all this has developed a fierce antagonism, which has kept the races apart, and has manifested itself wherever even in foreign countries, Orangemen and Irishmen have "foregathered." These Todds, therefore, have no Irish blood, but are as purely Scotch as the people of Scotland itself.

Of the nine distinct and so far as known wholly unconnected families of Todds in this country, three have come from Scotland direct, namely, the New York Todds, the Suffield, Connecticut Tods and (probably) the Philadelphia Tods; three have come from the North of Ireland, Viz., the Maryland Todds, the New Hampshire Todds, and the Pennsylvania Todds; and three have come from England, Viz., the Massachusetts Todds, the New Haven, Connecticut Todds and the Virginia Todds. Of these last three, the first two came from the republican or Puritan party, and the third from the royalist or Church of England party. Of all the Todds in this country the Virginians were at first highest in social rank.

The arms of the Todds, or of such as were authorized to bear them were, with trifling variations, three fox heads in red, in a shield, with a fox sitting, or running away with a goose, for a crest, and the motto, "Opertet Vivere"—"One must live" (even if he has to steal for it.)

It must be admitted that the Todds have been better than their motto; but it is not pretended that the Todds in this country have any right, or wish, to make use of these "childish things," which the manhood of the world has put away.

With a single exception the Todds have all come from the Highlands of Scotland.

The original name of the Irish Todds was O'Shauagh, which is Irish for fox. In consequence of an early English Parliment, which compelled the Irish to assume English names, the family changed its name, the Leinster branch taking the name Fox and the northern, Todd, or Wolfson, corrupted into Wilson. It appears from this that a portion of the Irish Todds are of Irish origin. All other Todds are Scotch.

They have come to this country by three different channels, First there are the Scotch Todds, who have come directly from Scotland.

In the latter part of the first half of the eighteenth century, probably between 1730 and 1740, Adam Todd landed in New York City, coming direct from Scotland, and still wearing the kilt and the tartan. He was twice married. He had one daughter, Margaret, by the first wife, and three children, Adam, James, and Sarah, by the second. Few of the descendants bearing the family name, attained to distinction. But the female descendants became the wives and mothers of eminent men. Sarah, the youngest daughter of Adam, married John Jacob Astor, a native of Waldorf Duchy of Baden, who eventually acquired an immense fortune by trading in furs in the Northwest, and by the rise in value of property in New York. In 1848 he founded the Astor Library in New York at an expense of $400,000. He also established still more useful institutions in his native city. John Jacob and Sarah (Todd) Astor had several children, of whom William B., known to be one of the richest men of his time, and who doubled the Astor Library, and Col. John Jacob junior, are the best known. Magdalen, the eldest daughter married first Gov. Bentzen, a native of Denmark, and Gov. of the island of Santa Cruz, and after his death Rev. John Bristed, of Dorchester, England. Their son, Charles Astor Bristed graduated at Trinity College Cambridge, England, and wrote a book about the union of life which has been much read, and became a literary man, writing under the nome de plume of "Carl Benson." It is sufficient to show that the Todd family came to be intimately connected with most of the prominent families of New York, that their records contain the names of Astor, Brevort, Springler, Sedgwick, Dodge, Vanderbilt, Aspinwall, Platt, Kane, Roosevelt, and others.

Next there are the Irish Todds, a part of whom came originally from Scotland. In the early part of the last century Robert Todd came from County Antrim, and settled on wild lands in the interior of Pennsylvania, whence his descendants spread into New Jersey, Carolina, Georgia and Kentucky.

It was into a branch of this Irish stock that President Abraham Lincoln married, Mrs. Lincoln being the great-granddaughter of Robert Todd, who was a native of Pennsylvania and a general in the Revolutionary Army.

Robert and Andrew Todd came over first from Ireland. Robert the Grandfather or Great-grandfather of Mary Todd, afterward Mrs. Lincoln, settled in Pennsylvania and Andrew at Todds Point below Cambridge, Md. Michael Todd and Levin Todd came over a few years later and settled near Andrew. Hugh Todd may have been their father. Their grandfather's name was John Todd.

James Todd and his wife were born in Scotland, but emigrated to the North of Ireland where all their children were born. These children were Alexander, Samuel, Elizabeth, and Andrew. Alexander and Samuel were both of them graduates of the university of Edinburgh. Samuel was never married. The others were all married in Ireland. James the husband and father died in Ireland. In 1720 his widow and all her children and children-in-law arrived in Londonderry, N. H., and settled there. The youngest son, Andrew distinguished himself in the French wars of 1744 and 1755, in which he served as Colonel of the provincial forces, and was one of the marked men of the time. The descendants of this family seem to have confined themselves for the most part to the region in which they first settled.

Lastly there are the English Todds, who have come to this country by way of England, where they have been known at least, so far back as the eleventh century. Upon their entrance into England some of the Todds seem to have retained their Scotch name, while others exchanged it for its English equivalent.

Hence the Todds and the Foxes belong to the same stock, and have always borne the same arms. The Todds seem to have settled first in Yorkshire where the name is common to this day.

There was a John Todde, who was high sheriff of York in 1390; and also Sir William Tod, who was high sheriff in 1477, and Lord mayor ten years later. Till within comparatively recent times there was two inscriptions in preservation on the walls of York, which the antiquary Leland thus describes—

"Under a piece of indifferent sculpture of a senator in his robes and a woman kneeling by him, 'A. Dom. M. CCCC. L.XXXVII. Sir William Tod mair jou-ates some tyme was schyriffe did this cost himself.' Near this on a table under the city's arks, is—"A Domini M. CCCC. L. XXXVII. Sir William Tod, Knight L. . . . . Mayre this wal was mayde in his dayes Lx yerds."

Among the more eminent of the Yorkshire Todds was Rev. Robert Todd, a dissenting minister of Leeds. Among other notices of him it is chronicled that during the Great Plague "he preached repeatedly and impressively on Hezekiah's boil."

There was also a Sir William Todd, who was High Sheriff of York under Charles I, in 1625.

There are in this country three distinct families of Yorkshire Todds. One of these sprung from Thomas Todd, who settled in Virginia, whence his descendants have spread into Kentucky.

In 1664 Thomas Todd came from England and settled in Ware Parish, Gloucester Co., Va., bringing with him his wife and one or two children born in England. He was a ship master and died at sea in 1676. His wife was Ann Gorsuch, dau, of Rev. John Gorsuch, Rector of Walkham, Hertfordshire and his wife Anne, dau. of Sir William Lovelace. Their children were Thomas, Christopher, James, William, Philip, Joanna, Anne, Frances and Isabella. One of the descendants of Capt. Thomas Todd, the eldest child, was the distinguished jurist, Thomas Todd of Kentucky, who after filling the highest judicial offices in that State was appointed by President Jefferson one of the Associate Justices of the Supreme Court of the United States, and held that office from 1807 till his death in 1824. His abilities and character won him the personal friendship of Chief Justice Marshall, and of the foremost men in the country. His eldest son, Charles Scott Todd was graduated at William and Mary College, practiced law in Frankfort, Ky. In the war of 1812 he was appointed Secretary of State of Kentucky by Gov. Madison; he was sent on a confidential mission to Colombia by the United States Government in 1820, and was appointed minister to Russia by President Tyler in 1841. Judge Todd's second wife was Lucy Payne sister of Mrs. President Madison; but when he married her she was the widow of George Steptoe Washington, youngest son (by the fourth of his five wives,) of Samuel Washington, brother of George Washington first President of the United States. Isabella the youngest child of Capt. Thomas Todd the immigrant, married John Madison the son of a wealthy planter of the same name, who was the original immigrant of that family. They had two sons, Ambrose and John, the latter was the father of the Right Rev. James Madison, President of William and Mary College, and first Protestant Episcopal Bishop of Virginia, and of his brother George Madison, Gov. of Kentucky. Ambrose married Frances Taylor sister of Zackary Taylor, who was the grandfather of Gen. Zackery Taylor, the thirteenth President of the United States. The wife of President Madison was Dorothea (commonly called Dolly) Payne, though when he married her she was the widow of John Todd, a promising and wealthy young lawyer in Philadelphia. She and her sister Lucy (Judge Todd's second wife) were daughters of John Payne and Mary Coles, a first cousin of Patrick Henry, and grand-daughter of John Payne who came to Va. early in the eighteenth century, and Anna Fleming, grand-daughter of Sir Thomas Fleming, one of the early settlers of Jamestown, Va. Their family belonged to the society of Friends, and their mother and Grandmother had been as celebrated as they were for beauty and charming manners. The Jefferson and Madison families were very intimate, and as President Jefferson was a widower, and his daughters were married and had duties elsewhere, he was accustomed to ask Mrs. Madison to preside at the social functions in the White House. For President Jefferson's two terms, and for her husbands two terms, therefore, in other words for sixteen years she was virtually mistress of the presidential mansion. During her long tenure of this elevated position she became widely known and universally admired and beloved. In some respects she was the most remarkable woman which this country has produced.

The second family sprung from John Todd, who came to Charleston, Massachusetts, in 1637, and two years later settled in Rowley, Mass. His antecedents are not yet discovered except that he came from Yorkshire. The Rowley Todds are found in Massachusetts, Vermont and the West and have furnished a general in the Revolutionary army and many men of ability and distinction.

The third family sprung from Christopher Todd, who was one of the original settlers of the New Haven colony, in Connecticut, in 1639. He came from Pontefract, West Riding, Yorkshire.

The register of the old parish church in Pontefract is still in existence and contains the records of the marriage of William Todd and Isabel Rogerson, the grandparents, and William Todd and Katharine Ward, the parents of Christopher.

William Todd the youngest "was killed in sort of a duel," when his son Christopher was but an infant, and Christopher was but about twenty years old when with his wife, Grace Middlebrook, he joined the New Haven colony. Here he became a farmer, miller and baker. He seems to have been at first one of the less prominent of the colonists. He signed the "General Agreement" modestly with his mark and quietly took his allotment in the "Yorkshire quarter" and when the "meeting-house" was "dignified" he had his place assigned him, not in one of the honorable "middle seates," but in the "third side seate" though "sister Tod"—for they worshipped in those days "the men apart and their wives apart"— was a little more fortunate. It was not long, however, before Christopher Todd began to make another kind of mark. He bought a grist-mill, which the town had built where Whitney's gun factory now stands; and it was long known as "Todd's mill." The records of the "General Court" show that he was continually adding to his real estate. He even rose to the dignity of a "viewer of fences." In 1650 he bought an acre and a half on Elm Street in the more aristocratic "London quarter" on a part of which St. Thomas's Church now stands, and occupied a house on the eastern part of it. This ground, known in after-times as "the Blue Meeting house Lot" remained in the family for nearly a hundred years.

Christopher Todd died at a good old age, leaving a will which is a model for sense and wisdom. He had three sons and three daughters of whom the whole earth around and in distant states has been overspread.

Of the daughters, Mercy, the eldest, married John Bassett, and became the mother of a large family; Grace, the second, seems to have been mentally deficient, and though married, was soon, deserted by her husband and was specially provided for in her father's will, as "incompetent to take care of herself or any estate."

Mary, the youngest daughter, was married to Isaac Turner, son of Captain Nathaniel Turner, "the right arm of the New Haven colony," who afterward perished in the "Phantom Ship." Her husband's sister Mary was the wife of Thomas Yale, the mother of Elihu Yale, the founder of Yale College.

Of the sons, each became the head of a large branch of the family. The descendants of Samuel, the second son, have been the most numerous. One of these was Rev. Samuel Todd, the impulsive but able first pastor of the North Parish in Waterbury, Connecticut.

Another was Rev. Abraham Todd, who was for forty years pastor of the West Church at Horseneck, Greenwich, Connecticut, which stood on the hill afterward made famous by Putman's desperate ride. Many amusing stories are told of this simple minded but respected preacher—

"Although a general favorite throughout the whole of his ministry he may have had some, though few enemies. It is related that during his ministry many of his hearers were outspoken men, even expressing themselves publicly during worship, as to the merits or demerits of the doctrines advanced. Among this class of persons was one Palmer, who was present during the service on an occasion when an Indian missionary preached to Mr. Todd's congregation. He preached fluently, and we presume well, and so great an impression did his logic make upon Palmer, that at the close of the sermon he exclaimed with great vehemence "Lets swap Todd and buy the Injin; he does a good deal the best." Mr. Todd himself was present on the occasion. The length of his pastorate, however, is a sufficient guarantee of his ability, as well as his excellence of character.

Another preacher of this line of descent, whose worth is established by similar evidence, was Rev. Ambrose S. Todd, D. D., rector for nearly forty years of St. James Church, in Stamford, Conn. His father before him had been a clergyman of the Episcopal Church, and he inherited more than the abilities and succeeded to more than the reputation and influence of his father. In all branches of the family in every generation the Todds have been inclined to the ministry and have risen to eminence in the clerical profession more than in any other, unless the medical.

To the line of Samuel Todd, however, belong George Todd, late Judge of the Supreme Court of Ohio, with his son, ex-governor of the same State; also Edward Todd, of New York city, who has won fame, not by his pen but by his pens.

The descendants of Michael, the youngest son of Christopher Todd, have also been very numerous. Like the descendants of the other sons, they have been mostly farmers.

One of them, S. Edwards Todd, is well known in our own day as a writer on agriculture. Another descendant of this line, in a former generation was Doctor Eli Todd, of Farmington, Conn., who was one of the founders of the Retreat for the Insane at Hartford, Ct. and acquired celebrity in connection with it. Ex-governor James E. English is also a descendant of a female branch of this line.

The descendants of John, the eldest son of Christopher Todd, continued for a time to till the paternal acres at New Haven; but at length one of his grandsons named Jonathan feeling the hereditary ministerial impulse, was graduated at Yale College in 1732 and ordained in the fall of the following year when scarcely twenty years old "having that part of the Church of Christ committed unto me which is in the East Guilford" now Madison, Conn. His pastorate continued for more than half a century. He was naturally accompanied in his migration from New Haven by his younger and only surviving brother, Timothy, who settled near him and became a merchant and magistrate, the father of a large family and the grandfather of Rev. John E. Todd who compiled the major part of this genealogy. He too was a graduate of Yale.

EXTRACTS FROM AN OLD FAMILY RECORD

Mr. William Todd was born in Pontefract, in York, in Great Britian and had two children, Christopher and Mary, and was killed in a sort of duel.

Mr. Michael Middlebrook lived at Hold Mills, who had five children, Matthew, Michael, Mary, Hester and Grace. Mr. Edward Wigglesworth married Hester, and the above named Christopher Todd married Grace.

From these documents it appears that William Todd and Isabel Rogerson married Sept. 24, 1592, had two sons, William, who was baptized June 29th 1593, and John, who was baptized Oct. 18, 1594.

William Todd 2nd, married Katherine Ward May 22, 1614, and had two children, Mary, baptized Oct. 14th 1614, and Christopher, baptized Jan. 12, 1617, and was killed in York, England, in a duel less than four months after the birth of his son Christopher, having been buried May 8th 1617.

John Todd who was baptized Oct. 18, 1594, was born at Pontefract, York County, England, and married in 1620, Alice Clayton of Bradford, York County, England, where their son John was born and who married in 1643, Susanna Hunt who was born at Bradford, County of York, in 1621. He emigrated to America, settling first in Charlestown, Mass. and shortly afterwards went to Rowley, Mass. where he became a prominent citizen. He was elected as a representative from that town to the General Court. They had the following children, viz.:

Catharine, b. 1658.
Thomas, b. 1665.
Timothy, b. 1668.
Samuel, b. 1670.
James, b. 1672.

It is thought probable that William Todd who married Isabel Rogerson was a son of Reginald Todd, freeman of York, 1605, and a collateral descendant of Sir William Todd, Lord Mayor of York, 1487.

Christopher married Grace Middlebrook, daughter of Michael Middlebrook of Hold Mills, Yorkshire—her sister Hester being married to Mr. Edward Wigglesworth.

As the record was taken down from the lips of an old woman, a long time ago, it is possible that "Hold Mills" was "Old Mills." The title "Mr." indicates superior position, as also does the story of a duel.

Christopher Todd and Edward Wigglesworth and their wives came to this country together and settled in New Haven Colony. They were not among the first settlers, 1638, but were among the first additions. Their names appear several times in the records of the Colony. Edward Wigglesworth was a cripple and a shoemaker.

The somewhat famous poet was one of his descendants and the family have been somewhat distinguished.

Christopher Todd became a planter, miller and baker. He owned several tracts of ground. His mill was where the gun factory now stands at Whitneyville. In 1650 he bought the house built by Jasper Crane, where St. Thomas' Church now stands on Elm Street, and the place remained in the family for a hundred years. He seems to have been a bright, level headed business man, but without much education. His will, signed with his mark, is still to be seen among the New Haven County records.

Christopher Todd[1], was born at Pontefract, West Riding, Yorkshire, England, baptized Jan. 12, 1617, died April 23, 1686, at New Haven, Conn., married Grace, daughter of Michael Middlebrook, of "Hold Mills" Yorkshire, England.

He was barely twenty years of age, when he and his young bride sailed with Mr. Davenports company on the Hector, probably sometime in April 1637. Two months was perhaps, the average time consumed in sailing from London to Boston in vessels of that day. The Hector arrived in Boston on the 26th of June 1637. The immigrants received a warmer welcome than ordinary. The eminence of "the famous Mr. Davenport" and the opulence of the merchants who accompained him, gave to this company, in the estimation of the colonists, an unusual value. Most of the company remained in Boston or the vicinity during the following winter, many of them having found employment suitable to their several vocations. Though somewhat scattered, some finding lodgings and employment in one place and some in another, they were still an organized company.

On the 30th of March, the leader of the company and most of the followers embarked at Boston, having formally decided to fix their plantation at "Quinnipiac" on long Island Sound. After a tedious voyage of "about a fortnight they arrived at their desired port."

It was perhaps, a peculiarity of New Haven, that cellars were used for temporary habitations. They were, as the name suggests, partially under ground and perhaps, in most cases on a hill side. On the Sabbath, they worshipped under an oak tree, near the landing place: and Mr. Davenport, in a sermon on Matthew IV, I, "insisted on the temptation of the wilderness, made such observations, and gave such directions and exhortations, as were pertinent to the present condition of his hearers."

The English, soon after their arrival at Quinnipiac, observed a day of extraordinary humiliation, when they formed a social compact, mutually promising "that as in matters that contain the gathering and ordering of a church, so likewise, in all public offices, which concern civil order, as choice of magistrates, and officers making and repealing of laws, dividing allotments of inheritance, and all things of a like nature," they would all of them be ordered by those rules which the scripture holds forth. For more than a year, they had no other civil or ecclesiastical organization for the transaction of business and, if we may judge of that year by the years that followed, there were penalties inflicted on evil-doers; but if any individuals were authorized to act as magistrates, the record of their appointment has not been discovered.

The plantation covenant, like the compact signed in the cabin of the Mayflower, was a provisional arrangement of men, who finding themselves beyond the actual jurisdiction of any earthly government, attempted to govern themselves according to the law of God. The elective franchise was limited to church members.

At first, Christopher Todd seems to have been one of the less prominent of the colonists. He signed the "General Agreement" modestly, with his mark and quietly took his allotment in the "Yorkshire Quarter," and when the meeting house was "dignified," he had his place assigned him, not in one of the honorable "Middle seats," but in "the third seate on the side," though "Sister Tod"—for they worshipped in those days, "the men apart and their wives apart"—was a little more fortunate, had one of the more honorable "Middle seates." It was not long however, before Christopher Todd began to make another kind of mark. He bought a grist mill, which was the first mill erected by the town of New Haven, "at the falls over the trap dyke at the east end of Mill Rock, two miles from the center of the town." This was at first, hired and then bought of the town, before the year 1686. This mill stood on or near where Whitney's Gun factory now stands and was long known as Todd's mill, and after 1798 passed into the possession of Eli Whitney, who erected there, the first establishment in America for manufacturing fire arms.

The records of the "General Court," show that he was "continually adding to his real estate." He even rose to the dignity of a "Viewer of fences."

In 1650, he bought of Jasper Crane, an acre and a half in the "London Quarter" with the buildings thereon. There he passed the remaining years of his life. This lot, which was on Elm street, between Church and Orange streets remained in the possession of he and his descendants for nearly a hundred years. It was later known as the "Blue Meeting house Lot," on account of the interior of the building, which the "New Lights" erected upon it, being decorated in that color. St. Thomas's Church now stands on a part of it.

Mr. Todd was a farmer, miller and baker and acquired considerable property, some of his land being remote from his residence.

He lived to be a little over sixty-nine years of age, having died in April 1686, leaving a will which is a model for sense and wisdom, and may be seen in the Probate records at New Haven, Ct.

He had three sons and three daughters, the descendants of whom the whole country around and in distant states, has been overspread. Of the sons, John, the eldest and his descendants for a long time continued to till the paternal acres at New Haven. Samuel, the second son succeeded his father in the grist-mill. His descendants have been the most numerous. Michael, the third son also had a large family and many descendants many of whom have been farmers. Mercy, the eldest daughter married John Bassett and became the mother of a large family. Grace, the second daughter seems to have been mentally deficient, and though she married Richard Mattock, was soon deserted by him, and was especially provided for in her father's will as being "incompetent to take care of her self or any estate." Mary, the youngest daughter was married to Isaac, son of Capt. Nathaniel Turner.

Soon after her marriage she was deserted by her husband. Her father, in his will, provided for her as one being "incompetent to take care of herself or any estate."

41. Jonathan, b. March 20, 1713; d. Feb. 24, 1791; married Jan. 9, 1735, Elizabeth, dau. of Capt. Samuel Couch, of Fairfield, Conn., who was born 1710, died Dec. 14, 1783. No children. Ordained pastor of the church in East Guilford, now Madison, Conn., Oct. 24, 1733, where he remained until his death in 1791, an exceptionally long pastorate of 58 years, all spent in one place. Graduated from Yale, 1732.

"He was a distinguished scholar, and a judicious critic in the learned languages: had given considerable attention to philosophy, and had thoroughly studied history, both ancient and modern. .... Assiduous in his application to reading, and preparations for the sanctuary, making the sacred oracles his guide, he fed his hearers with knowledge and understanding. . .Christ Jesus and him crucified was the sum and substance of his preaching. He had a happy talent at conversation. In times of uncommon sickness and mortality he devoted almost the whole of his time to visiting, and praying with the sick and dying, and administering consolation to the afflicted. A clear discernment and sound judgement made him an able counsellor. He was singularly mild and amiable in his disposition, clothed with humility and plainness. At his death, not one of the sacred order in the State had been of so long standing in it. Not one head of a family was then living, of all who were living at the time of his ordination. During his ministry he buried about twice his whole congregation. The calmness and resignation for which he was distinguished under all the afflictions of life of the gospel, were conspicuous in his most painful visitation through the last year of his life. Having uniformly and eminently exemplified the spirit of Christianity, he closed life with serenity, with peace, with joy, with hope."

From his sermon of Rev. James Dana, D. D., quoted and amplified by Rev. John Elliott.

"My great uncle was a plain, primitive clergyman in olden times. He lived a very long quiet life, dwelling among his own people, equally primitive. He seldom went out of his parish, and though he was a great student and thorough scholar yet in the things of this world he was a child in simplicity. It so happened that there was a vessel cast ashore near his house, and from the wreck several Africans, directly from Guinea, emerged. I never knew all the circumstances: but they came into his hands, and my uncle made pets of them all. He thought of instructing and educating them, and sending them back to Africa, and he thought of making them school-teachers here, and he had divers schemes for their elevation. But they were full grown people, could not speak a word of English, were immensely stupid, and never having been brought up to work, were anything but industrious. He gave them Scripture names, Cush, Tamar and the like. Cush was the oldest, uniting simplicity and cunning so that it was often difficult to say on which principle he was acting. His simplicity always had his own ends in view. Among his exploits, he got up a company of boys as soldiers. He made them long sticks for guns, but—a drum! He set his heart on having a drum for his company. In those days gentlemen wore small-clothes and white-top boots. My uncle was nice in his dress, and no one in his parish had his head in more perfect wig, or his feet in more becoming white-top boots. At great expense and pains he had procured a side of white leather for his boots, and laid it up carefully. All at once the leather was gone; but a smothered sound from something called a drum among the boy-soldiers revealed the secret. Cush had cut it up to make two drum heads: when called to account, he gravely assured his master that his company were delighted, and said, "the minister had more patriotism than all de gemmen in de town."

By Rev. John Todd, D. D.

By his will, Mr. Todd emancipated all his servants, making at the same time sufficient provision for them to encourage them to support themselves. "I do Declare my will in respect of my Servants and Slaves: I have long been convinced in my own mind that the Enslaving of the Africans brought from Africa, or those Born in this country, is unjust: and it is one of the sins of the land, and would Endeavour to free my Estate from the Cry of such a sin against it: and therefore do order and will in the manner and form which is following."

He removed from Branford, Conn., to "Long Ridge," in the town of Stamford, Conn., where he bought land, March 22, 1739, passed the remaining days of his life, and died there. He was the only settler in the town of Stamford by the name of Todd, at that time, and interesting entries may be found in the town records, of the different tracts of land bought by him at "the South end of ye Long Ridge." He seems to have inherited a taste for the milling industry, for now (1914) there are ruins of two mills at Long Ridge, one for grain, the other a saw-mill, both owned and operated by him during his residence there. He became one of the leading and influencial men of that region.

On the Northfield records one of the highways is laid out, "From Pockany Meadow to a little brook where Mr. Doolittle's horse died." The following is on his gravestone.

"Blessed with good intellectual parts,
Well skilled in two important arts,
Nobly he filled his double station,
Both of a preacher and physician.
To cure men's sicknesses and sins,
He took unwearied care and pains,
And strove to make his patient whole,
Throughout, in body and in soul.
He loved his God, loved to do good,
To all his friends vast kindness showed,
Nor could his enimies exclaim!
And say he was not kind to them.
His labors met a sudden close,
Now he enjoys a sweet repose,
And when the just to life shall rise,
Among the first he'll mount the skies."

58

Samuel Todd[4], (Samuel[3], Samuel[2], Christopher[1]) born March 6, 1716-17, died June 10, 1789, married Aug. 31, 1739, Mercy, daughter of Rev. Peter Evans, of Northfield (Mass.?). He graduated from Yale college in 1734; ordained May 7, 1740, as the first minister at Waterbury, Conn., Northbury Parish; dismissed Aug., 1764; installed pastor at Plymouth, 1766; removed to Lanesborough, Mass., remaining there two years; organized First Church at Adams, Mass. and remained there as pastor until 1778; Moved to Orford, N. H. where he died.

"He possessed a mind of more than ordinary strength, and great decision of character. His religious sentiments and feelings were strictly evangelical. The revivals of 1740, he warmly approved and exerted himself to promote,"

From the History of Berkshire County, Mass.

It was his approval of these revivals which led to his dismissal from Northbury. His church became Episcopalian.

"He was a clergyman of much note. I shall not forget how he used to shake his large white wig, when any of my good mothers little flock made a mistake in the old Westminister Catechism."

From The Foote Genealogy, by Erastus Foote.

After repeated attempts and failures, the people of Plymouth were at last successful in being separated from Waterbury, by the October session of the General Court, 1739, to be known and called the Parish of Northbury The society thus formed, at once set about settling a minister, and at a meeting of the society, Rev. Samuel Todd was selected, being ordained on the 7th day of May 1740. It is probable that Mr. Todd united with the North Haven, Ct. church during the pastorate of Rev. Isaac Stiles, father of President Stiles, of Yale. His family were of a religious character, as is proved by preserved relations or memorials of its members, in the days when each church member wrote out his or her confession of faith; that of his sister Susannah, afterwards wife of Caleb Humaston, recounts the wickedness of her rebellion against God, and how, when awakened to the sense of her sin, the counsels of Rev. Mr. Stiles and the death of an aunt were blessed to her conversion.

Mr. Todd graduated at Yale, under President Williams, in 1734, at the age of seventeen, six of the fourteen in his class becoming ministers. A lately discovered document shows that he received and rejected a call to another church before he was ordained at Northbury, May 7, 1740. He brought his wife on a pillion behind him, or possibly on another horse, into this wilderness, where there was a small, feeble, scattered, but devoted flock, situated somewhat similiar to the first Pilgrims at Plymouth, Mass. There were only bridle-paths through the woods then, and the streams had to be forded, the first cart bridge across the Naugatuck, at Thomaston, not being built till after 1747.

Mr. Todd's promised house was not begun on his arrival, and he set up house on Town Hill, where the cellar hole is now seen in the lot near Jason Fenn's, and where three old apple trees lately stood of an orchard set out by him; this was near his good deacon Moses Blakeslee, who had lately arrived from New Haven with his fourteen children. A spring flows near the old cellar hole, where tradition says Mr. Todd's first child, little Alathea, was drowned; near the tombstone of her sister Lucy, who died June 9, 1752, is an unmarked grave which is doubtless that of little Alathea, said to be the first person buried there. After two or three years delay, the society built Mr. Todd a house in Thomaston, which stood on the top of the hill where Mrs. Williams built later, on the road running north, which turned off from the river road at Mr. Grilley's corner. It is not known how long he lived there but he moved over to Plymouth Hill when the church was there and the people lived here; he had moved before 1746-47. His house was in the garden near Riley Ives' house, and is remembered by the old people as the Evans House, where Eli Terry, the father of clock-making, began house-keeping with one chair apiece for himself and wife, and one cup and saucer.

The great revival under President Edwards roused the New England churches from the cold formalism that grew out of the union of the church and the state and other causes, and Mr. Todd went to study it at Stockbridge, probably by the advise of Joseph Bellamy, settled two years before at Bethlehem, a great friend of Edwards, and then in the midst of a religious revival, in which every man, woman, and child in the parish was under more or less religious concern. When Mr. Todd returned, established prayer meetings, and labored with souls, many of his congregation rebelled against him, and abandoned his preaching. There was almost temporal trouble. The secession weakened the society, leaving half the number to do the work, to build Mr. Todd's house and a meeting house; there were only a handful of members left, and they were poor, just building their own houses and clearing their farms. But they did not break down under their heavy burden, and established the society on firm foundations.

Rev. Mr. Todd's house was built slowly, and in his first year he gave in twenty pounds of his salary towards it; but it was finished by December, 1742.

From the History of Plymouth, Conn. by Francis Atwater.

His name appears among those of the first proprietors of East Hoosac, which was, a year after the surrender of the British at Saratoga, incorporated Adams, in honor of Samuel Adams, the "Father of the American Revolution," on October 15, 1778. At the first town-meeting, the Baptist and Quaker vote won the day and Rev. Mr. Todd of the First Congregational Church received a minority. He was requested to relinquish his rights to the minister's lot 48, granted to him for life in 1766 by the General Court. However, he did not give up his rights to his farm, and this resulted in religious and political controversies between the settlers of the South Village and the North Village until the town was divided.

From The Hoosac Valley, by Grace Greylock Niles.

Abraham Todd, (Jonah, Samuel, Christopher) born Feb. 18, 1709-10, died Dec. 17, 1772, married Nov. 30, 1727, Hannah, daughter of Abraham and Elizabeth (Glover) Dickerman, who was born May 19, 1709, died July 21, 1777. She was a sister of Mary Dickerman, wife of his cousin Michael Todd. He was a graduate of Yale College of the class of 1727. He was ordained in 1733, pastor of the second or West society at Greenwich, Conn. at Horseneck, the church having been located on the hill down which Gen. Putnam later made his famous escape. Here Mr. Todd remained forty years or till his death.

"In 1732, the Church extended a call to Rev. Abraham Todd, who accepted the call, and during the next year was duly installed. Mr. Todd was then a young man, having just finished his theological studies. Of his character, the duration of his ministerial office over a single church is, perhaps, a sufficient indication. He is said to have been of a mild, easy disposition, and many anecdotes are handed down to us by tradition concerning him. Although a general favorite throughout the whole period of his ministry, he may, like others, have had some though few, enemies. It is related that during his ministry, many of his hearers were outspoken men, even expressing themselves publicly during worship, as to the merits or demerits of the doctrines advanced. Among this class of persons was one Palmer, who was present during the service on an occasion when an Indian missionary preached to Mr. Todd's congregation. He preached fluently, and we presume, well; and so great an impression did his logic and eloquence make upon Palmer, that he exclaimed, at the close of the sermon, with great vehemence, "Let's swap Todd, and buy the Injin; he does a good deal the best." Mr. Todd himself was present. In the old French war, "the inhabitants gave of their substance for the support of this war; and the ladies of the various towns formed associations for the clothing of the soldiers. Mrs. Abraham Todd was a president of such an association in Greenwich." "In 1773 occured the death of Mr. Todd, until which time he was pastor of the church in the West Society of Greenwich. For a period of more than forty years he had enjoyed the confidence of his people, adding to his flock. Many laughable ditties are related concerning him, which only show a warm heart and an innocent life. Unambitious and unpresuming, none of his people seem to have disliked him." "He was buried in the old burying ground in Davis's lane. In 1769

the society by vote "empowered Mr. Todd to desire one or more persons to tune the Psalm, as he shall see proper."

From Mead's History of Greenwich, Conn.

In 1732-33 Abraham Todd is called of New Haven, Conn., with a deed to Isaac Jones. In 1733 of Greenwich, Conn., in a deed of land in Governors Quarter, New Haven, to Michael Todd. In 1740 he sold dwelling house and lot in New Haven, that was Jonah Todd's late of New Haven, deceased, to Thomas Wilmot; in 1741 land in Governors Quarters to heirs of Francis Brown.

His wife survived him as appears by a deed in 1775 from Hannah, widow of Abraham Todd, of Greenwich, Conn., to Leveret Stevens, of land conveyed to me by my husband Abraham Todd.

Benjamin Todd[4], (Benjamin[3], Michael[2], Christopher[1]) born April 10, 1730, died Nov. 1755 on the Crown Point expedition, married by Isaiah Tuttle, Justice of the Peace, Sept. 3, 1755, Lois, daughter of Ezekiel and Susannah (Merriman) Tuttle, who was born Feb. 14, 1737-38. She married second Dec. 9, 1756, James, son of Caleb and Lydia (Benham) Atwater. Issue: (1) James; (2) Daniel; (3) Stephen; (4) Lois, m. Michael Sherman; (5) Eunice, m. E. Young; (6) Caleb.

They lived in Hillsdale, Columbia County, N. Y.

The compiler of the Tuttle Genealogy makes the claim that the above mentioned Benjamin Todd, who married Lois Tuttle, left a posthumous child who was named BenjaminTodd, and gives the date of his birth as being in 1756. Should this prove to be true, the latter would have been but a very few months old, when his mother married second Dec. 9, 1756, James Atwater. It would seem to me, reasonably safe to say that the compiler of the Tuttle Genealogy would have tried to be sure that his statement was correct before he published the fact that Lois Tuttle did have a child by her first marriage. He also states that Lois Tuttle married James Atwater, Oct. 21, 1756, instead of Dec. 9, 1756 as stated in the Atwater Genealogy. The remaining six children are mentioned specifically as being Atwater's the name of each child being written in full. On the other hand, the compiler of the Atwater Genealogy appears to be convinced that all of Lois Tuttle's children were the issue of her second marriage, and to corroborate this view, is the fact that the descendants of Lois Tuttle's first child call themselves Atwater's to this day.

It is neither the intention nor the desire of the compiler of this genealogy, to include any who do not rightfully belong there. And after carefully considering all the circumstances in the case, I am of the opinion that the oldest child of Lois Tuttle was a posthumous child, issue by her marriage to Benjamin Todd. This would most certainly be correct, should it actually be proven that he was born in 1756 as the compiler of the Tuttle Genealogy states.

Child:

*179. Benjamin, b. 1756; posthumous.

Titus Todd[4], (Benjamin[3], Michael[2], Christopher[1]) born July 16, 1730, died June 28, 1806, married first April 17, 1750, Elizabeth, daughter of Deacon Isaiah and Susanna (Doolittle) Tuttle of North Haven, Ct., who was born June 7, 1736. He married second June 7, 1758, Esther Barnes, who was born 1736, died Aug. 5, 1812.

He was a deacon in the North Haven church, having been chosen March 1, 1787, to fill the vacancy caused by the removal of his brother Jesse Todd to Springfield, Mass.

The diary of Ezra Stiles, President of Yale College from 1782 to 1785 has been published by order of the Yale Corporation and edited by F. B. Dexter. In Vol. 1, page 177, there is a list of "Families in New Haven in 1760." There are mentioned twelve families of Todd's including Titus Todd, who is mentioned with the Tuttle's under the heading "West side of river."

"In 1792 there appear for the first time the names of the Congregational "Choristers:" Caleb Blakesly, Thomas Cooper, Justus Bishop, Titus Todd, Jairus Sanford, Thos. Pierpont, Ezekiel Jacobs. They were authorized to take the lead in singing and three pounds was appropriated to hire the singing master." From North Haven Annals.

Jesse Todd[4], (Benjamin[3], Michael[2], Christopher[1]) born Jan. 1, 1735, probably in North Haven, Conn., died Oct. 27, 1819, in Agawam, Mass., married first Nov. 26, 1761, Lydia Cooper. He is mentioned in the Cooper Gen. He married second Feb. 24, 1790, Susannah, dau. of Isaac and Abigail (Hale) Chandler, of Enfield, Ct., born Feb. 3, 1754.

He was mentioned in the "Century Sermon" by Rev. Benjamin Trumbull of North Haven, Conn., as having removed to "Springfield in Massachusetts." He was buried in the cemetery at Agawam, which was originally a part of West Springfield, Mass., which was the town in which he lived.

The Thorpe records of his children appear to be somewhat wrong. It mentions ten children, seven of whom are assumed to have lived only a year or two in each instance. The town records of West Springfield, Mass. have been carefully searched and it appears there, that five of the ten children by his first wife, lived to be married and have families. Of the remaining five, no record could be found.

He lived at Farmington, Conn. until 1819, where he held a very large practice. He was one of the most prominent men of his time. In 1819 he removed to Hartford, Ct. where he was selected as the first Supt. of the Retreat for the Insane, he being very largely instrumental in locating the institution there. "He was the most perfect man I ever knew." He was very eccentric; used to play the violin on his lonely country rides.

"Dr. Todd, a native of New Haven, and a graduate of Yale College in 1787, was settled for many years in Farmington, where he acquired an extensive practice. In 1819 he removed to Hartford. He was a dignified man, with a handsome and benevolent face, his keen, large eye lighting up his whole countenance. His carefully chosen language was expressive, earnest, and convincing, and he had a large measure of personal magnetism. He was especially familiar with the medical literature of insanity and the European modes of treatment and care of the insane. He viewed the subject hopefully; but his feelings were so enlisted that his report on the sufferings of the insane, as they were then cared for in the State, is said to have moved nearly all his auditors to tears when it was read before the Connecticut Medical Society. A retentive memory enabled him to make good use of his extensive reading in matters outside of his profession. He possessed the rare ability of convincing his patients of his deep interest in their welfare, and manifested his sympathy often in unlooked-for ways; and with his remarkable powers in conversation he sought to divert their minds from their discomforts."

From the Memorial History of Hartford County Connecticut, by J. Hammond Trumbull.

Gideon Todd[4], Capt. (Gideon[3], Michael[2], Christopher[1]) born Nov. 3, 1737, Died March 22, 1817, married first Dec. 31, 1761, Prudence, daughter of Daniel and Phebe (Beach) Tuttle, who was born July 6, 1746, died Dec. 10, 1798, being a sister of Jabez Tuttle who married Mary Todd, see No. 202. "A very remarkable woman." He married second March 7, 1799, Eunice Brockett, who was born Feb. 21, 1744, died March 27, 1810. Married third July 4, 1816, Eliza Brockett, a sister of his second wife.

Prudence Tuttle was from Wallingford, Conn., her father being an officer there under the King. Gideon Todd was born in North Haven, Conn. Their marriage created a sensation in Colonial society. The Tuttle's were a wealthy and aristocratic family and when young "Gid" Todd asked their daughters hand in marriage, he was haughtily refused. He was their equal by birth and lineage, but had his fortune yet to make, and they had other views for their daughter. One winter day, there was consternation and dismay in the Tuttle mansion; Prudence was missing and investigation revealed the fact that she had eloped, mounted on a pillon, behind her lover, they had ridden to North Haven and were married. Her parents disowned her and her name was never to be mentioned. As time passed, reports reached them that Gideon Todd was getting on in a remarkable way; accumulating property and esteemed by every one, and they thought it time to forgive the disobedient daughter; so, they loaded a cart with bedding, furniture, and other valuables, and started the hired man with it for her home, they going on horseback. Arriving there first, they found their son-in-law at home, and were courteously received. After a time, the cart drove up to the door and they then announced that they had brought some presents, when Capt. Todd said with dignity, "Time was when the furniture and bedding would have been acceptable, for when we were first married, we slept on the floor on a straw bed; but now I can supply my wife with every comfort, and your presents cannot come into the house; but you will always be welcomed." And tradition has it, they returned home, as chagrined and mortified, as their neighbors were amused.

Mr. Todd supported the King, when the trouble came about taxation, until the time of the Boston "tea-party," when he threw himself and his fortune into the cause of the Colonists. When the news came of the British invasion of New Haven, he was in his barn, dressing off an ox, for meat carts were unknown in those days, when a man passed by on horse-back, crying, "The British have entered New Haven." Jumping on his horse he started at once for Fort Hale. His plucky wife, Prudence, at once took hold, and helped finish the work of dressing off the creature, with only a boy to assist, loaded the carcass into a cart, and immediately started, in her husbands wake, for Fort Hale, saying, "The soldiers must have meat to give them strength to fight." When the load arrived some-one shouted "Three cheers for Captain Todd's wife," and they were given with a will.

Capt. Todd was widely known, as he took an active interest in civil and educational affairs. His tavern, which was on the Northford Turnpike, "The Rising Sun" was a famous hostelry, and a favorite stopping place for travelers. It was also called "The Half Way House," between New York and Boston. It is well preserved, and is now the home of his grandson, G. Henry Todd, who takes pleasure in showing the old tavern sign, the military hat and vest, sword and other interesting relics of Colonial days. There are two deeds, given in the Reigns of their Gracious Majesties George II, and George III, Kings of England, and a permit for the first carriage ever owned in North Haven, for which luxury Gideon paid a tax. The wine cellar of the spacious mansion, is interesting, as are the wainscotted chambers. The story of its being haunted, only adds to its charm. During the Revolution, when excitement ran high, an enthusiastic patriot exclaimed in the bar-room that he would shoot at sight a tory; a poor ignorant slave boy cried, "I'se a tory, I'se a tory," when the impetuous rebel seized his gun and fired. It has been said that his ghost walks the broad hall at night time.

He was a Captain during the Revolutionary war, and a man of energy and decision. It is said that he fitted out a privateer, to help the cause, at his own expense, for he was a rich man for those days. There are many interesting stories told of the valient "Captain Gid."

FIFTH GENERATION

John Todd[5], (John[4], John[3], John[2], Christopher[1]) born Jan. 8, 1731, died Aug. 29, 1814, married Jemima, daughter of Daniel and Jemima (Lownsbury) Hoit, born Aug. 13, 1735, died Feb. 3, 1826. She was a descendant of Simeon Hoyte who settled in Charlestown, Mass. in 1629. The name had numerous variations such as Hoyt, Haight, Hait, Hayt, etc. Simeon Hoyte died at Stamford, Conn. There is an account of the family in Bolton's History of Westchester County, N. Y., as well as a history of the Hoyt family of Stamford. About 1700, certain members of the family changed the spelling of the name from Hoyt to Hait.

Mr. Todd, though he was well past forty years of age, and had a large family to support, enlisted in the 9th regiment of the 4th brigade of the Connecticut Militia, serving under Lieut. Col. John Mead. His Captain being Charles Smith. Mr. Todd was a Sergeant and drummer. He participated in the battles of Washington Heights and White Plains. Time of service being from Oct. 1776 to Jan. 1777. By a close study of the dates, one can readily see that he left his large family of eight children, the youngest being an infant of but two months, to serve his country in her time of peril and need, to help expell the hated British who were approaching his home so closely. That point having been attained he returned quietly to his home and family. Is it not easy for one to imagine why his term of service was not longer?

He was one of the founders of the Universalist Church at Long Ridge. Shortly before his death he gave a plot of gound to his relatives, friends and neighbours, for a cemetery. It might be said that the deed of this lot was inscribed on his headstone as follows,

> I give my friends this burial ground,
> Here to rest till the last trump shall sound;
> May we all in triumph rise,
> To meet our Saviour in the skies.

This was the origin of the beautiful little rural cemetery at Long Ridge. The loving, brotherly spirit breathed in the third line, shows the caliber of his manhood. The same spirit seems to have descended to those who now care so unselfishly and tenderly, to the much enlarged grounds.

Jonathan Todd[5], (Timothy[4], Jonathan[3], John[2] Christopher[1],) born May 17, 1756, died Feb. 10, 1819, married first May 17, 1784, Ruth Bishop, who was born 1765, died July 8, 1785; second Aug. 15, 1790, Chloe Lee, who died Nov. 20, 1796; third Jan. 11, 1798, Sally Fowler, who was born April 7, 1768, died Sept. 19, 1858.

Jonathan Todd was a well known physician residing in Madison, Conn. where he had a very extended practice.

He was instructed in medical science by Dr. Gale of Killingworth, whose eminence in his calling was great. Dr. Todd's forty years of practice gave him great experience. He was present in the medical staff, at the battle of Germantown, Penn. in the fall of 1777. Retired on account of ill health.

The high esteem in which Dr. Todd was held is shown by this extract from a published "Sermon delivered On the next Lord Day after the death of Jonathan Todd, Esq., by John Elliott, M. A., Pastor of the Church in East Guilford, 1819." After fifteen pages of sermon Dr. Elliott says he will give a brief sketch of "our respected friend, the beloved physician, not to eulogize the dead but to honor the providence and grace of God, which raised him up and made him, in his day, so great a blessing. After completing his studies he served his country about a year in the Continental army. In private life he was an obliging neighbor, agreeable friend, affectionate husband, kind parent, tender brother, devout Christian with solid, fixed moral principles." The sermon was thirty-one pages of printed matter, book size. His celebrated nephew, Rev. Dr. John Todd writes this discription of him, "a short, heavy, lymphatic man, whose hair was almost milk-white, careless about his dress, always rode horseback with saddlebags, and charged $0.17 a visit. He was most careful as a nurse, and though he bled, purged, and gave medicines that would now be thought fearful in quantity, yet he was a good physician. He was a peace-maker and, though a justice of the peace, he always settled the quarrel if possible without trying it."

On April 10, 1781, Capt. Peter Vaill enlisted a company of coast guards, of which Lieut. Timothy Field and Ensign Jonathan Todd were the other officers. The company numbered 100 men and served 8 months and 20 days. It was "posted in squads at different places along the coast, these relieving each other from day to day and concentrating wherever it became necessary." This company was engaged in the most serious encounter with the British which took place on Guilford soil. A full account of the service of this company may be found in the History of Guilford and Madison, Conn., by B. F. Steiner.

Capt. Jonathan Todd was commander of the Military Band from 1786 to 1792.

Child by Ruth Bishop:

271. William, b. Jan. 3, 1785, d. Oct. 8, 1831, m. July 5, 1814, Sarah Redfield. He was a lawyer and lived in Guilford, Conn., which town he represented at the General Court for several sessions. On July 4, 1818, Nathaniel Griffing and William Todd were chosen delegates to the convention which met at Hartford and formed the State constitution. The voters of Guilford rejected the results of their deliberations by a vote of 159 to 255. William Todd was a native of East Guilford, now Madison, Conn. He graduated at Yale College in 1806, was admitted to the bar in 1809, and practiced his profession for almost a quarter of a century in Guilford, securing the confidence and esteem of his fellow-citizens. For many years, his tombstone recounted that he was "a graduate of Yale College, an attorney at law, an ornament to society, a pillar of the church, and his bereaved partner's last comfort this side heaven." After her death, the stone was removed and a marble monument erected to both. She died in 1892, aged 96. They had no children.

A part of the above description was taken from the History of Guilford and Madison, Conn., by Steiner.

Timothy Todd[5], (Timothy[4], Jonathan[3], John[2], Christopher[1]) born May 16, 1758, died Dec. 1, 1806, married Nov. 27, 1783, Phebe, daughter of Jehiel Buel of Killingworth, Conn.

"Timothy Todd was sergeant after the Lexington Alarm, served as coast guard 150 days. Enlisted May 15, 1780." He was a physician in Southern Vermont. Dr. Todd removed to Arlington, Vt., having previously seen Vermont while in the Continental army as he was engaged in the battle of Bennington. "He was active, resolute and Persevering, his professional reputation rising and he soon had an extensive medical practice."

He was a man of considerable literary taste and talent, and wrote many medical and other articles for the journals of the day, and on various occasions pronounced popular orations. A curious little memorandum book of his, still preserved, contains, in his own hand writing, "an abstract view of the miscellanious writings of Timothy Todd, the unfortunate."

The catalogue gives the titles of orations, contributions to magazines, poems and plays, some of which were acted, and some operas, most of them having reference to politics. He was a freemason and termed a noted mason. He joined the military and bore a captain's commission. Represented Arlington for at least five years in the General Assembly, and for three years he was a member of the Governor's Council, a body of twelve men which, under the old Colonial Constitution, took the place of the Senate. At the time of his withdrawal from public life he was on the point of being elected Governor.

A few months before his last child was born, the doctor moved from Arlington to Rutland, Vermont, which was then becoming a more important place. Here he secured for himself a home, and at once established himself in practice. But he had hardly done so, when an event occurred which at once overturned all his plans. A rich man in West Rutland, who had been taken very sick, sent his carriage in great haste for the doctor and for his lawyer. The two gentlemen were seated together, and were going down the mountain about five miles from home, when some part of the harness gave way, and the horses became unmanageable and ran, and the carriage was overturned and broken. Perceiving that it was going over, the doctor called to his companion, who was on the upper side, to jump out; but he, in his terror, delayed so long that there was time for but one to escape. Doctor Todd was caught, and the consequence is thus stated by himself: "My left leg was fractured and dislocated in a most shocking manner; the bones were forced through the integuments, and dragged four rods, grinding the earth, and broken into innumerable fragments." Terrible as this injury was, the doctor was wholly unconscious of it till his attention was called to it by his horror-stricken friend. The lawyer immediately hurried for assistance; but the country was thinly settled, and two or three hours elapsed before his return. In the meantime the wounded man crawled to a rock by the side of a run of water, in which he laved the wounds, and cleaning them from the clotted blood and the fragments of his stocking which had been impelled into them; and, taking his instruments from his pocket, with astonishing fortitude proceeded to take up a principle blood-vessel. When found by his friends, he was discovered with a pencil in his hand, with which he had just been writing.

Of this writing, the doctor thus speaks: "I sincerely offered the following ejaculation to the Father of mercies and God of all comfort, and afterward put it in metre" (probably seeking with this mental occupation to distract his attention from his pain), "that in case I should not survive my wounds, as there appeared no hope, my children and friends might know the sensations which then possessed me.

TIMOTHY TODD, NO. 118

"'Great God, the day of thy power is dreadful indeed! Thy frown is death, and the blasts of thy nostrils crush us forever. Behold me in this hour of distress, through the sufferings of thy Son; Then shall mercy beam upon me, and open the gates of eternal day. I feel thy power; I own thy justice; and believe in thy word. Whatever fails, suffer me, O God, even if thou slayest me, still to trust in thee!'"

"You will judge," exclaimed his son, sixty years afterward, "of the character that could in those circumstances write that prayer."

Help at last arrived. A bier was brought from the grave-yard, and covered with feather-beds, and the unfortunate man was tenderly laid on it, and carried on men's shoulders to his home. The physicians who were summoned replaced the bones as well as they could, although he implored them to resort to amputation; and the result was, that eventually the limb was restored, so that the doctor could use it again without even a cane, and with very little halt in his gait; but this was only after much suffering and long use of crutches. He was confined to his bed for months.

As soon as prudent after this accident he with his family moved to Killingworth, Conn., where sometime afterward he died.

Asa Todd[5], (Gershom[4], Gershom[3], Michael[2], Christopher[1]) born June 28, 1756, died July 16, 1847, in West Chesterfield Mass., and was buried there. He married May 24, 1778, Abigail, daughter of Amos and Phebe Bishop, of New Haven, Conn.

He was a Baptist minister and held pastorates in Whately and West Chesterfield, Mass., for more than thirty years, having been ordained the first pastor of the Baptist Society of Whately, Mass., Sept. 9, 1789. In 1803 he removed to West Chesterfield, Mass., where he was ordained the second pastor of the Baptist Society of that place, and was dismissed Nov. 2, 1820, in consequence of a dissatisfaction developing among some of the members on account of his having joined the Free Masons, and also for difficulties of a more personal nature. Yet, in spite of the rupture, he lived among his old neighbors for many years afterwards, and was known as "Elder Todd," passing his remaining days in his old home. He was buried in the cemetery on the hillside below his home, by his mothers side.

Becoming a Christian at the age of 25, he soon felt it his duty to make known a Savior's love to those who knew him not, and although favored with very limited means of education, and meeting with many discouragements, yet naturally endowed with great strength of mind, and with perseverance, by his own efforts and the grace of God, he was an able and successful minister of the Gospel, for more than half a century.

His views of his own sinfulness and the exceeding richness of Sovereign Grace, increased with advancing age. He retained his physical and mental powers in his old age, to a surprising degree. In June, the month before he died, he walked a mile to the monthly concert, and then back home. In the four months, ending with his 90th year, he read the bible through in course, without the aid of spectacles, and also, read the New Testament twice through in the last five months of his life.

He was ill only about four weeks before his death, and seemed to fall asleep, rather than die. When told by his son that he had not long to live, he replied, "the will of the Lord be done, and it ought to be." His wife, the companion of his youth, and also, in his old age, to whom he was united in marriage sixty-nine years, survived him.

In early manhood, he enlisted in the Revolutionary army, and went with the expedition against Canada under Gen. Montgomery, enduring untold hardships during that most unfortunate campaign, when so many of his comrades were stricken with small-pox and other camp life diseases. Afterwards he was sent with others to reinforce Washington; was one of the sufferers in the retreat through New Jersey, and shared in the triumphs at Trenton and Princeton.

In his application for a pension, he mentions the battles of St. John, and Trenton, as among those in which he participated. He was finally granted a pension, and drew ninty-six dollars per year for the remainder of his life.

According to the record of the Connecticut men in the Revolution, he enlisted April 1, 1775, for nine months, as private, his Capt. was Porter, Col. not stated. In the Spring of 1776, he enlisted again, this time for twelve months, private, Capt. not stated, Col. was Ward.

One of his grand-daughters told the writer that, when he was about to enlist in the Revolutionary army, his mother took his gun and broke it, to keep him from going to the war, as her sympathies were with the king. She was unsuccessful, however, for he spent nearly two years in the army. His older brother, Mix, was a tory, and went over to the British, and what property he possessed was cofiscated, the proceedings of which may be seen in the Probate Court records in New Haven, Conn.

Elnathan Todd[6], (John[5], John[4], John[3], John[2] Christopher[1]) born May 5, 1774, died Oct. 10, 1819, married in 1798, Sally Smith, who was born Sept. 17, 1778, died Dec. 19, 1819.

Mr. Todd was a man of sterling character, and marked ability, always conducting himself in public and private life with dignity and temperance. He was very successful in all his undertakings, and became a prominent citizen and a large and wealthy land owner. Sudden worry and anxiety over business troubles caused his untimely death at the early age of 41. With the loss of her husband, Mrs. Todd lost all interest in life and would daily, in sunshine or in storm, wander to a hilltop near her home, with her youngest children's hands clasped in her own, where she could see in the distance the hallowed spot where her loved one lay. There she would remain for hours, tears coursing down her checks, till the tired little ones, aroused her from her grief, and teased her to go home. Grief so intense soon absorbed her strength and in a little over two months, she too, passed away and was laid by her loved one's side. She seems to have thought that life was not worth while after her husband's death.

Nine orphans were left to struggle for an existence, the eldest barely twenty years of age, the youngest not quite two, in this home that was once so happy, one that had been unusually free from gloom and care, that the people for miles around would tell stories of its pleasures. Harriet, the oldest child, bravely tried to hold the home together, but sad to say the usual cruel story followed, the undertaking was too great for her to accomplish unaided and alone. The available funds disappeared and later she married, the younger ones were put out to live in strange homes. When the youngest child became of age, there was but little left for each to share, of the once large estate. Some of them were fortunate and happy, some were very sad. James called his brothers to him one day, and told them when he grew rich in the sunny south, he would return to them; he was never heard from after his departure.

The writer has often listened to this story as she sat on her father's knee and heard him tell how he had often stood in the dark, outside the brightly lighted homes and watched other mothers take their tired little ones on their knee, draw their heads to their shoulders and rock them to sleep, then run from the spot with an aching heart, to cry himself to sleep—alone.

John Todd[6], (Timothy[5], Timothy[4], Jonathan[3], John[2], Christopher[1]) born Oct. 9, 1800, died Aug. 24, 1873, married Mar. 11, 1827, Mary Skinner, daughter of Rev. Joab and Lucy (Collins) Brace, of Newington, Conn., who was born May 5, 1806. He graduated at Yale College in 1822; Andover Theological Seminary in 1825. Congregational minister; ordained pastor of Union Church, Groton, Mass., 1827; Edwards Church, Northampton, Mass., 1836; First Church, Pittsfield, Mass., 1842, where he remained till his death. Author of Students Manuel, Index Rerum, Simple Sketches, Truth made simple, and many other popular books. D. D. Williams College 1845.

His biography has been very interestingly written by his son, John E. Todd.

His father, having died when he was about six years of age, he says that he went to live with his aunt Matilda, who had married a Mr. Hamilton, who was a sailor, and with whom he made it his home until he was about twelve. They lived in North Kilingworth, Conn., before Clinton, the south part of the town, was set off a town by itself.

His quiet life while he was living with his aunt in North Kilingworth, was varied with occasional visits to East Guilford, Conn., where his father's older brother Jonathan lived. He had a large family of his own, but he always gave the little orphan a hearty welcome.

At these visits often, as well as sometimes at home, he met his father's younger and only other brother, after whom he was named, and to whom he was especially attached. He says, "I loved him from my childhood; for he was one of the very few who used to speak to me in the tones of hearth and home that make you feel that the cords which bind you to kindred are not all gone. He was the only one, after my father's death, who would take me into his arms. What child does not love to be fondled? and what remembrances do the days of childhood send down to later years, and make one wish that such and such things wholly beyond our control, but which formed our characters, had been otherwise! You will recollect that I had no father, and my two uncles had all the love of my heart."

"In the year 1810, my uncle Hamilton being a prisoner among the Spaniards, my aunt broke up housekeeping for one winter, and I went to live with Mr. Evarts, at New Haven. I went to school to Mr. Jarman."

Mr. Jeremiah Evarts was his own cousin, a son of his father's oldest sister, and was at that time practicing law in New Haven. He had married a daughter of the celebrated Roger Sherman, and was residing on Chapel Street, just opposite the college buildings. He had quite a large family, having a number of gentlemen connected with the college at his table. Little "Jonny" was employed in waiting upon the table, running errands, and doing a small boy's work about the house. It was, undoubtedly, in the family of this eminent man, and in this collegiate atmosphere, that that desire for a college education, which afterward became so strong, began to spring up in the boy's mind.

JOHN TODD, NO. 284

One day he was sent to "the cove," where were a store and a small village. By the side of the store there stood a long cane fish-pole. It was very long, straight and light. How he longed for that pole. If he only owned that pole, he thought he would be perfectly happy. At last, after much talk and great promises he started for home. Proudly he mounted old Kate's back. She was frightened at first with such a long whip hanging over her. Finally he reached home, and instead of finding the family running out to greet me and admire my purchase (he had run in debt for it, and he knew it would take him a long time to pay the debt), they laughed, and asked, "Why, John, what do you expect to do with that fish-pole"? It had not occured to him that there was not a pond within miles of where he lived, there being only a small brook running among the bushes where a pole over four or five feet long was cumbersome. He "made believe" fish for a time, and then set it up against the house, as it was too long to take in the house. In a short time the sun cracked it, then he thought he would make flutes out of it, so out comes his knife and began making flutes; he made the finger holes with a hot iron, but not a sound could he get out of it, it was a total failure. "Never mind" says he, "I can make some nice canes." Out came the knife again and he cut the pole into half a dozen pieces; but in doing this he broke and spoiled his knife. Now he had the canes; but what was he to do with them. He tried to use one as he went to school; but found he did not need a cane; it was in his way; and when he wanted to chase a squirrel running on the fence, it was a burden, and he lost it or threw it away. Piece by piece went his pole, till not a foot of it was left; and yet to be paid for! Nor was that all; it seemed as if every body wanted to torment him about his pole. If the cattle got into the mowing-lot, they would cry, "John, your fish-pole will be capital for those cattle;" if the canker-worms built a nest on the very top of the trees, it was, "John, now for the fish-pole"! And when little Johnny dropped his cap in the well, he begged for my fish-pole to get it out. It was many years before they ceased to hint about a good long fish-pole.

In the fall of 1812, he went to live with his uncle Doctor Jonathan Todd, at East Guilford, (now Madison) Conn., to enjoy better means of schooling, his opportunities having as yet been small. Here he lived two years very quietly. Here he learned to swim, to handle a boat, to find the best fishing-grounds, and to hunt the sea-fowl. Through all his life he preserved a passionate fondness for the sea, and for this coast in particular.

When he had lived with his uncle about a year and a half Mr. Evarts came on from Charlestown, Massachusetts, to which place he had moved, to attend commencement at New Haven. While in the vicinity, he went to Madison, to visit his relatives. Here he met again the boy who had spent a winter in his family. On his kindly inquiring of his welfare the boy replied, "I had hoped, sir, that you would want me again in your family." This led to further inquiries and eventually to a generous offer from Mr. Evarts of a home in his family, with a view to his attending a better school than could be found in Guilford. The offer was accepted and when he was asked if he had money enough for the journey, he replied that he had. Upon being questioned more closely, he admitted that he had but seventy-five cents. However, no one gave him any more; and so, on the 21st of November, 1815, with a small bundle of clothes under one arm and seventy-five cents in his pocket, he left forever—not his home, for he had had none, but everything that had been home-like, and started out into the world alone. It was on Monday morning at about eight o'clock that he started off, and arrived in Charlestown, Mass., on Saturday morning. How he ever made the journey is unknown. Tradition has it that he slept by the roadside, protected by a fence or a cedar bush only from the November frosts. For the first three or four weeks he was very homesick, and says that he "was convinced that not many diseases are more painful." He lived in Charlestown until 1818, assisting Mr. Evarts and attending school.

In the fall of 1818, he returned to Connecticut in the same courageous spirit, and by the same mode of travel in which he had gone from his uncle's three years before—afoot, with his entire wardrobe under one arm, and his entire library under the other.

Concerning taking his entrance examination to college he says, "It was afternoon when I reached New Haven, and I went directly to the Presidents room. There I found President Day, and with him Professor Kingsley, and they proceeded to examine me without delay. They found that I was totally unfit to enter college, but, on becoming acquainted with the circumstances of the case, they agreed to admit me, with the understanding that I was to apply myself to my studies with special exertion. It was late in the forenoon when I left the room. I was tired with a long morning's march, and the excitement of the examination, I had had no dinner, and had but three cents in the world. Two of these were spent in paying toll at Tomlinson's Bridge, and with my last copper I walked till dark toward Guilford. When I could no longer see my way, I lay down under a cedar-bush and slept. Very early in the morning I woke, stiff, sore, and almost frozen. I reached my uncle's in the course of the morning. The college required, as it does now, a bond from some responsible person that the student's college bills shall be paid. I found my uncle unwilling to sign such a bond, as he feared, not unreasonbly, that he would have to pay my bills for me. In great discouragement I walked over to Killingworth, and told my brother Jonathan of my trouble. Now Jonathan was not worth one cent more than I was; but he was a noble fellow, and had a great heart, and as soon as he heard my story he exclaimed, "Give me the bond; I'll sign it." And so he did. I never intended any deceit, but it has since occurred to me that probably my brother's signature was mistaken for that of the well-known Guilford physician, the names being the same. At all events, the bond was accepted, and at last I was a freshman in Yale College."

He kept his promise so faithfully and studied so diligently, that he damaged and nearly ruined his eyesight, having been obliged to wear spectacles the rest of his days. Besides keeping up in his studies, he had to earn the money to pay his own way. He was so studious and so attentive to his duties, that he could not take any part in the college sports, nor in the frivolous college life, his views on his duties being too serious thus to fritter his time away.

Caleb Todd[6], (Hezekiah[5], Caleb[4], Samuel[3], Samuel[2], Christopher[1]) removed from North Haven, Conn., to Cheshire, Conn., in 1783. A few years later when his brother Moses moved to Wolcott, for whom he endorsed notes, and later was obliged to meet them which took all the property he owned and left him bankrupt. In those days people were imprisoned for debts. He lost his home and suffered punishment besides, having been sent to jail where he passed two years. After this affair, he passed his remaining days on a very poor farm near Waterbury, Conn.

To whom he was married or what became of his descendants is unknown to the writer.

Hezekiah Todd[6], (Hezekiah[5], Caleb[4], Samuel[3], Samuel[2], Christopher[1]) born Nov. 5, 1755, died May 18, 1836, married Jan. 1783, Mercy, daughter of Joseph and Hannah (Blakeslee) Holt, who was born Jan. 6, 1760, died Sept. 12, 1819.

He removed from North Haven, Conn., to Cheshire, Conn., in 1783, with his brother Caleb. He too, endorsed notes with his brother Caleb, for his younger brother Moses, and later had to meet his obligations, and managed to pay in full and thus saved his home. The story is that he was advised by his friends to leave for parts unknown, to make sure to keep out of jail; but he replied, "I have not done a thing that I am ashamed of and I will not turn my back to any man." He lived in Cheshire, Conn.

In 1796, he in company with his brother Moses, and Bani Bishop, of Southington, Conn., bought of Mr. Samuel Byington, of Wolcott, his farm and hotel located west of the Green, and a little southwest of the Meeting house. This farm contained forty-seven acres, and besides the hotel there was a wheelwright shop. The price paid was four hundred and eighty-four pounds. They did not keep the business very long, for in Feb., 1797, they sold out to Abijah Fenn, who built in the following year, 1798, the store near the corner of the lot towards the meeting house. This store was later purchased by Moses Todd.

"In the Autumn, especially along the mountain range in the east part of the town, there were immense flights of pigeons. The killing and salting of these for market was a recognized industry. Hezekiah Todd, father of Street Todd above named, had a substantial brick house, which was jocosely said to have been built of pigeons, as the money he put into it was largely the product of this industry."

From History of Waterbury, Conn., edited by Joseph Anderson, D.D.

Hezekiah Todd lived very near the angle where the three towns of Cheshire, Wolcott and Waterbury met.

He moved from North Haven, Conn., to Wolcott at the time his brother Moses did, which was soon after 1783. It is supposed that the four brothers, Caleb, Hezekiah, Bethuel and Moses Todd were not in sympathy with the Colonies during the Revolutionary war, but it has not been verified.

Bethuel Todd is supposed to have removed to western New York or to Ohio.

In 1797, Moses Todd bought of Mr. Dan Tuttle his farm in Wolcott, Ct., containing ninety-three acres, at the south-west corner of the green, having paid seven hundred and fifty pounds for it. This farm was afterwards owned by Mr. Asaph Hotchkiss who resided on it for several years.

After going into bankruptcy, Mr. Todd removed to north-eastern Ohio, where he became a very prominent farmer. He bred and improved a strain of swine known in that region as Todd's Improved Chester Whites.

He kept a store in Wolcott, Conn., around 1800, but soon afterward sold it to Benham and Tuttle who were in the business for a number of years.

survivor of his father's family who journeyed west together at that time, and as he often remarked was the last of the pioneers in his neighborhood.

"Uncle Henry" (as he was familiarly called by two generations) was of a kind, genial and social nature, fond of friends and friendly with all, knowing no enemies. Positive in his views and convictions, he was public spirited and the very soul of honor, with a keen and discriminating sense of right and wrong. Generous to a fault, with a willing heart and free hand, he was ever ready to help the needy, or a good cause. Possessed with a remarkable memory and clear mind, stored with a large fund of anecdote and incident, he took delight in relating the events that happened in his pioneer days, and even further back, in the long ago times of his boyhood.

Her father was in the Revolutionary war. "He conducted a fire ship to the enemy and was badly burnt, the attending boat having left him too soon, he had to swim ashore, where he was found three days after in a helpless state. He was taken over to Rye, (N. Y.?) and there died."

Chauncey Todd[6], (Jonah[5], Stephen[4], Samuel[3] Samuel[2], Christopher[1]) born March 24, 1784, in Cheshire, Conn., died July 26, 1855, in New Berlin, N. Y., married Sept. 13, 1812, Susan Hotchkiss, of Bethany, Conn., who was born July 18, 1792, died April 20, 1854.

There must have been some Horace Greeley in those days telling young men to "Go West", for he set forth for the unbroken wilderness of Central New York in 1805. He returned later to Connecticut to look for some young woman also anxious to "Go West", and found her in the person of Susan Hotchkiss to whom he was married on Sept. 13, 1812. It is the tradition that the wedding trip was made on horseback to the new home in the forest in the town of Butternuts, Otsego County, N. Y. In this pioneer home they lived for many years and there was born the patriarchal family of eleven, all of whom grew to man and woman-hood, nine of them marrying and having families. He was a true pioneer, for after spending many years on the Butternuts farm, he moved to the vicinity of New Berlin, Chenango County, and there carved out another home. Late in life he again became restless and was with difficulty dissuaded from again breaking up and emigrating to the wilds of Michigan.

The following sketch was written by his son, Rev. Russell Todd.

My father, Chauncey Todd, aged twenty- one, in company with a young man, Enos Lawrence by name, came from Cheshire, Connecticut, into Morris, Otsego County, N. Y., then an almost unbroken wilderness, in 1805. Selecting a tract of land about one mile north from the present village of Morris, my father at once began the clearing of a space for a log hut, the beginning of a future home, then commenced the toilsome labor of felling trees and clearing the land. By late autumn two acres of land were cleared and sowed to wheat. He then returned to Cheshire for the winter.

By the pleasant sequel which followed our fancy may take the pleasant liberty of imagining that the winter was not altogether void of pleasure to my father. In the neighborhood was a home to which he made frequent visits. Here he found her who was to be his future wife, Susan Hotchkiss by name, to whom he was to be married in the near future. Whether he was married in the spring following I am not certain. But it was not long before they traveled together to their new home in the wilderness.

Our fancy must supply the picture of the next twenty years. The portion of the forest selected by father in Otsego County became a well cultivated farm with orchard, a comfortable dwelling and good outbuildings. Here in this home were born eight sons and three daughters. In 1836 my father sold this farm and purchased another about two miles north of New Berlin, Chenango County, N. Y., to which he moved in the spring of the same year. Here he remained until within a year or two of his death, which occurred in the year 1854, my mother preceding him the previous year.

As I recall the memory of my parents, after the lapse of fifty years, the relation they bore to each other as husband and wife gives me great pleasure and profit. There is a witness of a uniform mutual confidence and trust. The display of affection was quiet and undemonstrative, of such a nature that the home life seldom if ever suffered a chill. In all the twenty-five years of my life under the home roof, I do not recall such a difference of feeling between my father and mother that there arose any hardness of words on either side. The best and truest evidence of my father's love and devotion to my mother was his studious watchfulness to lighten her cares and burdens of the home life. The boys being in number more than the girls, when it was apparent that the day's duties were to be of an unusually hard nature my father's quick eye took in the situation, and one of the former was commissioned to be the helper of the mother. Again and again was it my lot to be an assistant at the wash-tub, a helper in the preparation of meals, clearing away and washing dishes and sometimes applying the mop to the kitchen floor. This relief to my mother was by no means transient, fitful or the result of a special appeal on her part. It was a regular fixed custom of my father that she be relieved in time of need.

It was my father's custom in the winter season to spend his evenings in the shop at the cooper's trade. Being a very industrious man, his labors extended well into the evening, when he would join the family group, finding mother mending or knitting, the children, some reading and some at their games. From well established habits of my father, the children had learned what greeting to expect from father when he had taken his seat in the family circle. "Susan (he always addressed her by her christian name) is there nothing the boys can do for you, no apples to pare for sauce, no pumpkins to be made ready for tomorrow's pies or something else they can do for you?" Often in late years have I gone back in memory to my boyhood days to the old home on the hillside and thought especially of the fact how watchful and tender was my father of her who was his helpmeet in the affairs of home. The cares of such a numerous family of eleven children were by no means light or few.

Another characteristic of my father worthy to be noticed was his firm regard for what he thought was right. There seemed to be no place in his nature for compromises, no place for light or trivial action when a principle was at stake. I mention but one incident to show this character in him, the same adherence to duty which he thought was right was shown in every phase of life. It was a Sunday morning in the early dawn of winter. There had been many days of constant and heavy rains, the roads were in a fearful condition. On the preceding night a heavy snow storm had set in, a fall of six inches was already on the ground and underneath a great deal of mud. It was still snowing and fair promise that it would continue all day. The question of not getting to church on such a day under such circumstances, was a foregone conclusion on the part of the boys. We can't get to church to-day was the unanimous verdict of the whole household save the small minority of two who remained silent and undisturbed. The usual hour for starting the two mile ride to church drew near. The children were anxious. They saw evident signs of preparation for going to church on the part of the silent two. At last the firm but gentle command from father came, "Boys, you may go down and harness 'old grey' to the single wagon, your mother and I will go to church." It is difficult to describe the feelings of us boys as we saw our aged parents go down the hill towards church that Sunday morning. This sense of our moral weakness is better imagined than put down in words. I do not think any of us children did ever forget the lesson of that Sunday morning.

Speaking of a religious custom of my father, it was his uniform habit, every Sunday evening, to gather his children, old and young about the old home fireplace to teach and hear them say the old church catechism, mother joining with the rest in saying the creed and the ten commandments and the remainder of the matchless formula.

Turning in thought to the memory of my mother, her life seemed to run in helpful harmony with my father's, exerting a most potent influence on the household. My mother's character was of the gentle type. Her life, as it seems to me now in this far away time, was like the running of a quiet stream through a peaceful meadow. Very seldom a ripple of temper or excited manner of speech. Correcting or rebuking her children was always in the manner and tones of love. I do not recall a time when she lost her self-control or gave way to harsh words.

As to my mother's personal appearance, I will only relate what as a boy of ten years I overheard from a group of ladies standing around the stove one winter's Sunday noon in old St. Andrew's Church, New Berlin. "Mrs. Chauncey Todd bears the sweetest and most winning face of all the ladies who appear at church." Her eyes were a soft brown, a pleasant smile about the mouth, her hair a light brown lightly touched with auburn, remaining untouched with grey to the last.

Josiah Todd[6], (Dan[5], Christopher[4], Samuel[3], Samuel[2], Christopher[1]) born Dec. 18, 1794, in North Haven, Conn., died Oct. 22, 1869, married June 17, 1816, Elizabeth, daughter of Jesse and Patience (Todd) Clinton, who was born Sept. 20, 1796, died Nov. 18, 1886. For her mothers ancestry, see number 213. They lived first in North Haven, Conn., then Newark Valley, N. Y., and later they returned to North Haven.

Josiah Todd was a prominent man in town, school, society and military matters for about fifteen years. He was orderly sergeant for some ten years in the old militia company and was more than once offered a commission, but declined, partly on the ground that with his growing family his means would not allow. I think I can truthfully say from my own personal knowledge and what has been told me by those who were contemporary, and members of the company with him, that no one equaled him in all the varied tactics with company drill. He was very prompt in commanding orders, and trained members of the company in the manuel of arms to great exactness and promptitude. It was common in those days, for an orderly sergeant to form the company, which, under his direction was very quickly done, and after short drill in the manuel of arms, which usually took place on the 'Green', a little north and west of the old church, not quite in front of what was then the old Esq. Bishop place (now E. Lindsley), for the orderly to march the company on the double quick, with the fifes and drums playing 'Yankee Doodle' and the colors flying, up to the old tavern on the corner, to receive the commissioned officers, who were in waiting. My father owned a book of tactics, which contained all the necessary knowledge for company drill, up to Army Corps, which he well understood, at least, so far as it was practically necessary. I think he had qualities which would have ensured him success pretty well up in the military scale as an officer. He took pride in it, was prompt, enthusiastic, and patriotic.

However, he was more particularly noted as a singer and teacher of vocal music. He not only led the choir and gave instruction in music here in North Haven, for many years, but, also gave instruction in vocal music in the adjoining towns, and in New York State as well. He was conceded, by good judges, to have been the best tenor singer in the State. His ability to awaken enthusiasm in a choir of singers was remarkable, for he was exceedingly prompt and enthusiastic. His time and ear were perfectly correct, and he would detect at once, any inperfection in that respect in others. He was noted for his ability to read and sing the most difficult music at sight. He studied and understood the science of music, and composed some creditable pieces in that line. His concerts were remarkable for the selections and for their inspirating effect on an audience.

After his removal to the State of New York, he was called upon to engage in teaching music. At the close of the lessons, he gave concerts, as was usual in those days, that were greatly appreciated by the audiences present.

He was a great reader and a lover of poetry, and in his library were to be found copies of all the English poets, among which were Shakespeare, Milton, Cowper, Dryden, Henry K. White, Thompson, Young, Burns, Spectator and Washington Irving.

He was well versed in the history of our country from the earliest settlement to the close of his life, and especially its political history. He was a strong Whig, and a great admirer of Henry Clay, and took a very active part in the campaign in his behalf, for the presidency. He was a great admirer of the New York Weekly Tribune and especially the editorials written by Horace Greeley, the reading of which was looked forward to every week as a feast, but did not live to see the unfortunate close of the life of the celebrated founder of his favorite news paper.

Written by one of his sons.

In the spring of 1834, Josiah Todd with his family consisting of himself and wife, two sons, Samuel and Frederic Handel, and three daughters, Aurelia J., Henriette W., and Mary J., removed to New York State. The main reason for his going was this. The Heartley's owned some seven hundred acres of pine and hemlock timber land. A man by the name of Belcher had built a house and a saw-mill on the premises and had done some lumbering of the pine in that vicinity, and some off the Heartley property.

The hemlock was quite valuable, or rather the bark was, being used for tanning purposes.

A contract was made between Josiah Todd, William Heartley and the above mentioned Belcher, to take charge of a large tannery near the saw-mill on the same stream.

Josiah Todd and family, together with Timothy Andrus and family with his son-in-law Gilbert, left North Haven, Conn., with their household goods, boarded a schooner at New Haven bound for Albany, N. Y. Here they changed to a packet canal boat of the Erie Canal and thence to Montezuma, N. Y. From there, they entered a short branch of the canal of about seven miles which brought them to Cayuga Lake. Here they boarded a steam-boat bound for Ithaca, N Y., at the upper end of the Lake, which was about forty miles distant. A steam tug hauled the canal boat with their goods. The passenger boat was old and leaky, and the lake was very rough. Most of the passengers were sea-sick. The tug, with the goods, did not arrive at Ithaca, until the next morning. Mr. Gilbert and Luther Andrus came on with the goods, as they were left in charge of them. Samuel Todd was left at the hotel, to await the coming of the goods, while the others of the company got aboard of a lumber wagon and rode about 25 miles over a rough road to Newark Valley, their destination.

It was a journey of fifteen days duration, from North Haven, Conn., to Newark Valley, which is a decided contrast with the time required in the 20th century, to make the same journey. There were no railroads at that time in New York State, and very few in other states.

The company arrived at their destination about the 15th of May. There was quite a snow storm the night after their arrival. The distance traveled was about five hundred miles. By the way of the Newburgh turnpike, the distance is about one-half, or about 250 miles.

It was understood that the tannery would be ready for business about the first of June, but it was some three months after their arrival, before work could be commenced.

The Andrus family had exchanged their farm in North Haven, Conn., for one in the neighborhood, a little north of the tannery, a portion of which had been under cultivation for some years. The Todd family did not go west for any purpose, but to engage in the business of Tanning. Consequently, they took up their abode right among the big hemlocks, between two high hills, a very tough place for farming, as the sequel will show.

Josiah Todd bought about forty acres, all heavily timbered, except about four acres, which had been cleared of the timber about a year. Consequently, the land was covered with large pine and hemlock stumps. He had little money left, and the fact that the tannery was not ready to run, the little money he did have was soon gone. Then came the tussle, which seemed to fall to Samuel's lot.

And to add to his troubles, about a year after the tannery opened for business, the company failed, which was a sad disappointment to the Todd family, as well as a serious loss, and the cause of many hardships.

BRADSTREET

Clarissa Todd[6], (Samuel[5], Samuel[4], Samuel[3], Samuel[2], Christopher[1]) born April 27, 1800, in Litchfield, Conn., died Aug. 23, 1889 and was buried in Franklin Grove, Ill., married Sept. 10, 1820, Major Daniel Moore, son of Daniel and Jannet (Moore) Bradstreet, who was born Nov. 6, 1795, in Hartland, Windsor County, Vt., died May 15, 1877 in Franklin Grove, Ill., when a child of 2 years, she moved with her parents to Middletown, Delaware County, N. Y., in 1802, thence to Illinois in 1844, and to Franklin Grove, Ill. in 1864.

Mrs. Bradstreet was a cultured woman of charming personality, genial disposition and holiness of living. None knew her but to praise.

Her obituary which appeared in the Franklin Grove Reporter for August, 1889 is as follows.

Lo! A mother is fallen in Isreal. It is with sorrow that we note the death of "Mother" Bradstreet which occurred Aug. 25, 1889.

She has been among us as a helper and means of strength for so many years that her loss will be keenly felt. Possessing fine physical and mental powers she devoted the last fifty-nine years of her life to the service of Christ. For some eleven years her husband was a local preacher in the M. E. denomination.

Her work has been crowned with great results, it being estimated that several hundred people have been converted and vast numbers instructed and aided to live sanctified lives. "Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord."

When a child of two years, her family moved to Middletown, N. Y., where six older children taught in the neighboring schools. Although living at the time in a pioneer state, she received many advantages. Her earliest recollections numbering her mother's perusal of the Scriptures, and her father's tales of his three years toil in the Revolution.

In 1831 she was converted and united with the M. E. Church in the spring of that year. In 1833 she consecrated herself to Christ and lived a consistant and happy Christian life.

Of her twelve children, nine preceeded her to the spirit world. Three survive her; Mrs. G. T. Patrick, of Byron, Ill., Mrs. J. D. Smith and Mrs. C. Helmershausen, of this place. She also leaves eighteen grand-children and eight great-grand-children.

The funeral occurred at the M. E. Church. The sermon was preached from her chosen text, II Timothy iv, 7, 8, by Rev. E. D. Hull, of Kingston, Ill., assisted by Rev. G. W. Bassett, pastor of the M. E. Church, after which she was laid to rest in the family lot, surrounded by relatives and friends who sorrow not as those without hope.

Mr. Bradstreets line of descent was (Daniel Moore, Daniel, Henry, Simon, Simon, John, Simon.) He joined

About two years and a half after this he came to Whitesville, N. Y., where he resided till called away to his reward. He came to these parts while it was all a wilderness. He raised a large family of seven sons and six daughters, all of whom, except one, attained the age of maturity. Father Todd was an exemplary Christian, a kind parent, a devoted companion, and a useful citizen. He retained his sprightliness and vivacity until a week before he died, and his reason was unimpaired until within two or three hours before he left the shores of mortality. He was a Methodist Clergyman and as to his pastorates, his son, Stephen Olin Todd says: "soon after he began preaching he was located at Winchendon, Mass.;

thence to Haddam or Haddam Neck, Conn., about 1834, he went next to Hebron, Conn., in 1836, later he was at Londenderry and Wilmington, Vt., about 1848 to 1852; thence to Amherst, Mass., 1853; Feeding Hills, Mass., 1854; and South Deerfield, Mass., 1855." He was chosen selectman in Charlemont, Mass., in the year 1869. His son says about this fact: "it is strange what little circumstances alter relations. The year my father was selectman, heavy rains gutted a large number of the town's roads, so badly that the tax rate had to be increased, thus the selectmen incurred the displeasure of their townsmen and were not re-elected."

Mr. Todd served in the war of 1812, the length of service being unknown to the writer. After the war, the Government gave the soldiers either a pension or a farm and he took the farm which was located just outside of Killawog, Broome County, N. Y. So far as can be learned he passed the remaining years of his life in Killawog and probably on this same farm. In connection with the operation of his farm, he was a cattle dealer.

He fell dead on the streets of New York City while there on a visit.

Early in life, Mr. Todd learned the blacksmiths trade which he followed in New York City until 1833, when he removed to Adrian, Mich., making the journey by way of the Erie Canal to Buffalo. At Buffalo, he chartered a schooner to carry his family and household goods to Toledo, Ohio. The journey from Toledo, O., to Adrian, Mich., occupied five days.

Arriving at Adrian, Mich., which at that time consisted of only a few log houses, he opened a blacksmith shop at once, which was the first in that region. After working three years at his trade at Adrian, he removed to Rome Township, Mich., where he cleared a section of land. He helped to organize a Methodist Society; gave land for a school house and also for a cemetery. Here most of his active years were spent in honest toil. He established and merited the reputation of being an honest, conscientious and upright man, a kind neighbor, a good citizen and a consistent Christian. During eight years of this time, he kept a tavern, but it was one from which no drunkard ever reeled, because, it was kept without a bar or a drop of liquor. The most numerous of all his guests during this time were the pioneer Methodist ministers, who were none the less welcome, and entertainment for them was free.

In 1859, he returned to Adrian, Mich., to spend the remaining thirty years of his life in retirement, in the enjoyment of a quiet home and a beautiful old age.

Mr. Todd's religious faith was Methodist. In politics he was a Republican until the Prohibition party was organized, with which he very soon became affiliated, and gave it his enthusiastic support, as did four of his sons.

Mr. Todd was born in Pound Ridge, which is a short distance north of Long Ridge, both communities being included in the town of Stamford, Conn. He finally settled in Long Ridge. He and his cousin, Frederick Scho-

They also, established a shoe business there, and when it had expanded to large proportions, they sold the factory which they had occupied, to Seth Smith Cook and Charles H. Lounsbury. Isaac Todd[7], (Moses[6], Hezekiah[5], Caleb[4], Samuel[3], Samuel[2], Christopher[1]) born Dec. 18, 1808, possibly in Newtown, Conn., died July 17, 1890, in Wakeman, Ohio, married June 13, 1830, Fanny Booth, who was born Oct. 26, 1805, died Sept. 28, 1887, in Wakeman, Ohio.

The following sketch is taken from a History of Huron County, Ohio.

"In the year 1827 Isaac Todd, then a young man of 18 came into the township and the year following bought the farm where he now lives. There was no improvement east of him at that time. In 1830 he married Fanny Booth. Mr. Todd seems to have had a hard struggle of it in the Wakeman woods. For some time after his marriage he was destitute of boots or shoes and in attending church his wife would wear her everyday shoes carrying her Sunday best until near the church, when she would take them off for her husband to wear and put on her best ones. Afterwards, when he became able to own a yoke of oxen, they rode to church on a sled the year round."

The above incidents prove very conclusively their devotion to their church. He built his first log house in the midst of an almost boundless forest through which there was no road or path save that indicated by glazed trees. When a road was built some years later, he selected his farm; it ran nearly a half mile from his house. When he chose the location for his farm he ventured on the undertaking with $18 capital. With this small beginning in the wilderness he cleared the heavily timbered land until his farm eventually included some 240 acres of very fertile and productive soil, all of which is now available for cultivation save a few acres preserved for a "sugar bush". For a number of years their sugar supply was obtained from this source, and their meat supply he obtained wild hogs, deer and wild turkeys and other game which abounded in that region. The woods also abounded in vast quantities of beech and other nuts on which the wild hogs especially, became very fat.

The above description of the career of Isaac Todd would go to show or at least reflect the consequences of his fathers unfortunate business ventures, even though the disaster followed in the wake of events over which he had no control. However, the after life of both Isaac Todd and his father would go to show that they were very liberally supplied with initiative and perseverance, having settled in the midst of an almost boundless forest, and which he proposed to help to subdue, and in fact doing his full share.

Kneeland Todd[7], (Moses[6], Hezekiah[5], Caleb[4], Samuel[3], Samuel[2], Christopher[1]) born Dec. 18, 1808, in Newtown, Conn., died April 24, 1883, married April 24, 1836, Julia Booth, a sister of his brother Isaac's wife. She was born July 22, 1808, died March 11, 1895.

Mr. Todd was one of the early pioneers of Wakeman, Ohio, where he arrived in 1833. He shared the privations of early pioneer life with his twin brother for three years, when he returned to Conn. and there married Julia Booth, of Woodbury, Conn. It is a singular coincident that his marriage and death, also the death of his son Albert, took place in the same month and the same day of the month. Soon after their marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Todd returned to Ohio and settled in Wakeman. In 1845 they removed from Wakeman to Florence, Ohio, where he died.

He was a man of sound judgment and good principles, kind and affectionate as a husband and father and a good neighbor. He aimed to live uprightly, was honest and just in his dealings. In his pursuit of agriculture and horticulture he was always thorough and practical, which combined with perseverance and industry brought him success and competence, though for fifty years he was physically weak.

Politically, morally, and religiously, his guiding star was the RIGHT, and he rejoiced in every good work. In the old anti-slavery movement he was a radical and a pioneer. In 1835 he professed Christianity and was one of the original members of the Congregational Church in Wakeman, Ohio.

Removing to Florence he united with the Presbyterian Church there, in which he held the office of deacon for several years, till the time of his death.

He lived for his family, his fellow men, and his God. His example and good deeds still live and are worthy of imitation.

Leonard Todd received a country school education and when 21 years of age he married Julia Bradley, of Hamden, Conn., in Grace Episcopal Church, in Hamden, the first couple to be married in the new church, the same is standing and is still used for worship.

Leonard Todd was a good illustration of New England thrift. By hard work and rigid economy he not only got a good living off from one of those stony New England farms, but he amassed quite a fortune for those days. It was not necessary to teach thrift to Leonard Todd in the last century, for he together with his frugal wife had already learned that lesson and learned it well. It would be well if we who live in this 20th century would practice it more as did they. Like so many of those saintly men and women of those times, while frugal and careful and thrifty, Leonard Todd was not miserly or penurious as can be testified to by the fact that he was always very generous to the church, also to individuals when occasion required and to worthy causes.

Mr. Todd was a very strong churchman, and was deeply devoted and strongly attached to the Episcopal Church, the church of his ancestors. In that faith he lived and died, strong in his convictions in the same and a sincere christian.

On Dec. 24, 1871, Leonard and Julia (Bradley) Todd celebrated their Golden Wedding.

In 1919, their descendants erected a beautiful bronze tablet in Christ Church, Bethany, Conn., in their memory, as follows:

Alfred Todd[7], (Caleb[6], Caleb[5], Stephen[4], Samuel[3], Samuel[2], Christopher[1]) born Dec. 28, 1799, probably in Marcellus, N. Y., died April 17, 1877, married Feb. 19, 1828, Mary Ann, daughter of Oliver and Esther (Sayles) Hovey, who was born Jan. 15, 1809, in Marcellus, N. Y., died May 25, 1888.

Mr. Todd lived in Marcellus, N. Y., until 1835, seven years after his marriage, when he moved to Michigan and purchased a farm near the village of Nottawa, St. Joseph County, as a pioneer. Shortly before moving to Michigan, he had bought eighty acres of land in the primeval forest, almost the entire State being then practically a wilderness with many Indians still to be found everywhere, but mostly of a peaceful nature. The State at that time was very sparsely settled, and the nearest railroad station was about sixty miles away, so that the products of the farm had to be drawn with horses that distance to market. Perhaps the most striking of the traits of Mr. Todd was his unusual high conception regarding absolute honesty and justice. His views and practice of honesty were so universally known and regarded that it was a matter of public comment, and his children thought proper accordingly to have inscribed on his tomb, "He was an honest man."

Mrs. Todd was one who combined a rare intellect and accomplishments with much executive ability, being also a poetess and a leader in the intellectual circle of the County. Both Mr. and Mrs. Todd were Presbyterians, and imbibed the rigid discipline of that church and times including the strictest views respecting temperance, which were thoroughly inculated and have been adhered to by all of their children.

Y., married Oct. 5, 1831, in Salisbury, N. Y., Hon. Arphaxad, son of Thaddeus and Lois (Griswold) Loomis, who was born April 9, 1798, in Winchester, Conn., died Sept. 15, 1885.

At the age of three years his parents removed from Winchester, Conn., to Salisbury, N. Y. His father was a farmer in moderate circumstances, and Arphaxad's boyhood days were spent in assisting his father upon the farm. At the age of 15 he was "hired out" by his father to teach a district school in the town of Norway, eight miles from his home, for a term of three months, at $6 a month "and board around," walking home Saturday nights and back again Monday mornings. By teaching winters and attending Fairfield Academy summers, he educated himself. He began reading law in 1818 at Johnstown, then at Watertown, then at Carthage, and finally ended his course at Sacketts Harbor, and was admitted as an attorney of the Supreme Court in Jan., 1822. In 1825 he finally decided to locate in Little Falls, N. Y., where he entered upon the practice of his chosen profession. In 1827 he received the appointment of Surrogate (County Judge) of the county, which office he held until 1837. In 1835 he was appointed first judge of Herkimer County and held the office until 1840. In 1836 he was elected a member of the 25th Congress. The reason he was not returned to the next Congress is, that Herkimer County was not entitled to the member, having had the representative in Congress since 1824, the 26th being conceded to Lewis County. He was a member of the New York Assembly in 1841-2 and again in 1853. He was highly honored by his colleagues.

In addition to his accomplishments in his profession and in public life, he had rare tastes for the beautiful in art, a marked mechanical skill and inventive turn of mind, which gave him much occupation at several periods of life, and beyond and above these, he acquired unusual attainments in literary and scholarly studies.

It was in December 1818, that he discovered a deficiency in his hearing, which grew gradually so that finally his extreme deafness caused him to retire practically from public life in 1857.

Samuel Todd[7], (Josiah[6], Dan[5], Christopher[4], Samuel[3], Samuel[2], Christopher[1]) born Aug. 22, 1817, in North Haven, Conn., died Dec. 1898, in South Manchester, Conn., married first, Jan. 7, 1851, Emily, daughter of Harvey and Nancy (Johnson) Rich, of Owego, N. Y., who was born Dec. 10, 1825, died Dec. 26, 1868, in Newark Valley, N. Y. He married second, Jennie Button, who lives in South Manchester, Conn.

Samuel Todd went to Newark Valley, N. Y., with his father in 1834, and a year later, when the tannery, which was to have given employment to Samuels father, Josiah Todd, went into bankruptcy, Samuel, who was then about eighteen years of age, and very ambitious, took the brunt of the struggle to stem the tide of misfortune and hardships. In the winters he taught school, while in the summers and autumns, he worked at clearing off the big hemlocks, some of which were monsters, some of them being about 100 feet tall and four feet in diameter at the stump. After the huge trees were cut, they were rolled into large piles and burned. People of the present day would consider this method a very wasteful way to prepare land for agricultural purposes. In the spring time, they devoted their time to the manufacture of maple sugar and syrup. Samuel was the leading spirit in all this work. At last a comfortable home was provided for the family.

Not long after the family arrived at Newark Valley, N. Y., Samuel, with other members of the family, united with the Congregational Church. The society, learning that Samuel was a flute player, invited him to play in the church choir, which he did for several years, and at a later date became its leader. He taught a Sunday school class, and later became superintendent. When he was about twenty years of age, the church society offered to give him a college and theological education on condition that he become a missionary of the American Board of Foreign Missions.

In 1865, he was chosen deacon, and held the office until his return to North Haven, Conn., where he united with the church in his native town.

The church society at Newark Valley, N. Y., had, for some years previous to the arrival of the Todd family, settled a Presbyterian minister. Congregational ministers were not as numerous in New York State in those days as they are now. The town was settled mostly by people from Massachusetts and Connecticut and the church was organized strictly on Congregational principles. Rev. Marcus Ford, continued to preach as a settled pastor of this society, from his first settlement at the age of 22 until he was 70 years of age, when his health failed him. Mr. Todd, being one of the leading members of the church, thought it a wise thing to secure a congregational minister. The church at that time was connected with the Presbytery through the influence of Mr. Ford, who was a graduate of Princeton Theological Seminary, therefore, a Presbyterian "dyed in the wool." The church had been so long under Presbyterian influence (nearly fifty years) that many of the members were half inclined that way, and were quite indifferent as to the Congregational plan. Through the tact and influence of Mr. Todd, a Congregational minister was secured with little opposition and has so remained to the present time with satisfactory results.

While Mr. Todd was superintendent, many new books were added to the Sunday school library, new singing books suitable for Sunday school use were obtained, and a good cabinet organ was purchased.

In those days, there was occasionally organized, independent companies of militia. Mr. Todd became a member of such a company of riflemen, passing from one grade to another until he received a Captains commission which he held about five years, at the end of which service, he was exempt from further military duty, according to a State law.

He was always very active in temperance work. When he was about twelve years of age, he became a member of the Total Abstinence Society in North Haven, Conn. After moving to Newark Valley, N. Y., he continued to do all he could to forward the temperance cause. He was instrumental in obtaining a charter for organizing a division of the order of the Sons of Temperance, and was chosen its first Worthy Patriarch. This division became very large and prosperous, and continued so for many years. He was secretary of the Union Total Abstinence Society for several years, holding the office until his return to North Haven, Conn.

He was often chosen as delegate to the meetings of the Presbytery, and later, to the Congregational Association conventions, and to the State Sabbath School conventions.

Through the influence of W. S. Lincoln a near neighbor, and later a member of Congress, at the time of the civil war, Mr. Todd was appointed as one of the watchmen in the Quartermasters department then stationed at Hagerstown, Maryland. Soon afterwards, he was transfered to Washington, D. C., where he held an office in the department from November 1863 to April 1864. He was present at the inaugural address of Abraham Lincoln's second term, only a few weeks before his assassination, and at the reception day ceremonies, he shook the hand of the distinguished man whose wife was Mary Todd, a descendant of Robert Todd who settled in Pennsylvania.

While he was living in Washington, his first wife, Emily Rich, began to show alarming symptoms of consumption, which dread disease eventually was the cause of her death two years later.

Afterwards, while visiting relatives in his native town of North Haven, Conn., he met Miss Jennie Button, who later became his second wife. In the latter part of his life he returned to North Haven, Conn., to live.

Children by Jennie Button:

1385. Jennie, m. Oct. 15, 1913, James Caleb Bidwell.
1386. Clarence, unmarried, lives in South Manchester, Conn.

Frederick Handel Todd[7], (Josiah[6], Dan[5], Christopher[4], Samuel[3], Samuel[2], Christopher[1]) born Feb. 26, 1819, in North Haven, Conn., died March 18, 1868, married Sept. 17, 1850, Phebe Elizabeth, daughter of Williams and Maria (Benjamin) Slosson, who was born March 9, 1830, in Newark Valley, where also she was married at her fathers house.

His father removed with his family to Newark Valley, when he was about thirteen years of age, and being in poor circumstances could give his son only the advantages of a common school education. Upon arriving at the age of manhood Mr. Todd became a tanner (which was his fathers occupation in life), which business he followed for a number of years; he also opened and carried on a store for the sale of general merchandise at Newark Valley, N. Y.

In 1858, Mr. Todd made a purchase of lumber lands in northern Michigan, and seven years later, or thereabouts, began operations in clearing, lumbering, etc., in that State. He was drowned in the Muskegon River while attempting to cross the boom or shute, letting out the logs, the current being very rapid. He was a stanch member of the Republican party, and represented the town of Newark Valley in the board of supervisors for two or three terms. In his death his wife lost a dutiful husband; his children, a loving father; his friends and business associates, an honest man.

His Children were born in Newark Valley, except Frank H. the youngest, who was born in Big Rapids, Mich.

Mr. Todd was married in Lowville, N. Y., and soon after moved to Mina, Chautauqua County, N. Y., where he bought land which was covered with heavy timber. He cleared a spot large enough for his house and a garden. The house he built of logs, and here the first three children were born. About 1832, he hired out to a man in Sherman, N. Y., to manage an ashery. As the work was very exacting, he soon gave it up, and started for Illinois, where he bought a nice prairie farm. After having bought the farm, he went back to New York to get his family and household goods and again started for Illinois and their new home, the journey being made with a team. He went to Boston before he was of legal age, having bought his time from his father. He was engaged, for some years, as a salesman in gentlemens furnishings, but owing to ill health incurred by being forced, as a boy to do farm work beyond his strength, he was obliged to take up some outdoor occupation, therefore, he bought and sold goods of all kinds, loaned and invested money and acquired, for his times, a modest competency. Oliver Uel Todd[7], (Uel[6], Oliver[5], Abraham[4], Jonah[3], Samuel[2], Christopher[1]) born Oct. 5, 1805, in South Salem, N. Y., died Oct. 5, 1880, married Dec. 10, 1832, Hester Jane Green, who was born Sept. 12, 1809, died Feb. 18, 1896.

At the age of seven, he moved to Somers, N. Y., with the other members of the family, and settled upon the farm which afterwards became his own and home for life. Educational advantages at the time were extremely limited, and the youthful Oliver made the most of the few winter months of tuition available at the district school, and acquired a fair education, but his life work was to be more manual than mental, and his education was most thoroughly practical, installed by the hardy experiences of the old days of farming.

Close application and untiring industry, naturally resulted in developing a model farm, comprising about two hundred and fifty acres, with a good house and other farm buildings. At the age of twenty-seven he married Miss Hester Jane, daughter of Isaac Green of Somers, N. Y., who brought to the home he had prepared, an experience in the duties pertaining to a farmers life, and a genial and happy disposition, well calculated to enhance prosperity.

Conveniently situated upon the direct turnpike road, the immense droves of cattle and sheep, slowly wended their way toward the city markets, found on the Todd farm ample accommodation, and for many years it became a noted hostelry.

The following items taken from his account-book for the year of 1849, show something of the character of his business in those days.

To 11,000 head of cattle @ 8¢ per head per night, $880.

To 16,000 head of sheep @ 1¢ per head per night, $160.

Drivers board and lodging, (Cattle), $110.

Drivers board and lodging, (sheep), $80.

Besides, he wintered forty head of cattle of his own. A full half century of activity resulted in the accumulation of an ample competence. The last decade of his life was rendered inactive by an insidious nerve disease, which though incapacitating him for any physical exertion, left his mind unclouded to the end. He died on his seventy-fifth birthday, and was buried in the family cemetery, located but a few rods north of his house.

Child:

1507. Mary Ophelia, b. Nov. 19, 1833, d. Oct. 8, 1887, m. Oct. 21, 1857, James T. Green, who was b. Having d. without issue, her estate was divided between her many cousins, descendants of her thirteen uncles and aunts. She, too, was buried in the Todd Cemetery near the farm.

Addison Eli Todd[7], (Eli[6], Solomon[5], James[4], James[3], Samuel[2], Christopher[1]) born July 22, 1821, in Charlemont, Mass., died Sept. 14, 1878, married, March 22, 1860, Isabella Ball, who was born Feb. 13, 1833, in Greenfield, Mass., in which town they were married.

Mr. Todd lived the first twenty-one years of his life in Charlemont, Mass., assisting his father with the work on the farm. Attaining his majority, he started for the west. Arriving in Michigan, he found employment in the saw mills of Lenawa County for several years. Returning to Massachusetts, he purchased a piece of timber land and began manufacturing "shook," or dressed staves which were shipped to the West Indies, to be used for barreling sugar. In 1854, he, with his brother, Dexter, journeyed to Minnesota, and was employed for a time in building and operating a large saw mill at St. Anthony, which was the first mill to be built on Rum River. In those days, wooden pins were used to hold the frame of buildings together. Each man on the job was requested to make a pin. As Mr. Todd's was the best specimen offered, he was given the task of making enough for the mill then in process of construction.

In the spring of 1855, Mr. Todd returned to Minnesota, this time making the journey on horseback. Passing through Rochester, where the settlers were just beginning to build, he arrived the next day on the bank of Zumbro River. There being no bridge, he and his horse were obliged to swim across. This being accomplished, he proceeded to spread his money and papers on the grass to dry. Journeying on he soon after came to Elba, Winona County, Minn., which seemed to be situated in a well watered and wooded valley, and looked something like home to him, his old home in the east. Near here he took up his claim of 160 acres in sections 6 and 7, where he made his home until the time of his death, where his family lived for forty years.

In 1858, he built a saw mill, which for many years, prepared the lumber for the houses of his neighbors. Improvements were made on the farm from time to time, and by various purchases, the area was increased to 350 acres in the home farm and 40 acres more in another lot, it being well stocked, and free of debt.

In politics, Mr. Todd was Democrat, which did not, however, prevent him from supporting the Federal Government during the civil war. One time he advanced a thousand dollars to the town for bounties to volunteers, which was subsequently returned to him. He was chairman of the board of Supervisors during the war, and again in 1871. He was active in the support of the schools and held various school offices.

He left the old home in Charlemont, Mass., when he was about twenty-two years of age. For the next four years he worked in the woods, most of the time getting out "shook." In the spring of 1854, he with his brother Addison removed to Minnesota and was employed in constructing a dam and mill on Rum River. The following winter was spent in the "pinery" on the same stream and in the spring he removed to Elba, Minn., and there he took up 160 acres of land in section eight, which he at once began to improve. In the summer of 1856, he built the first frame house in Whitewater Valley, Minn.

In 1858, he went back to Massachusetts and at that time married Miss Elmer, soon after which event, they returned to Minnesota and settled down on his farm in Elba, which he continued to improve and enlarge until he eventually owned 253 acres of land located in sections five, eight and nine, in what is now Fairwater, Minn.

The house was enlarged and remodeled in the summer of 1883.

In politics, Mr. Todd was a staunch democrat; but he never took an active part in public affairs.

Children:

*1609. Jennie Alberta, b. May 23, 1860.

At the time of his fathers last sickness, he was called home from California, to manage the farm, which he continued to do for three or four years after his father's death. In the Autumn of 1890, he again left the old home in Fairwater, to enter Western College in Toledo, Iowa, to prepare for the ministry. Thence, he went to the Moody Institute in Chicago, Ill. From this school, he was appointed pastor of the United Brethren Church at Gray Eagle, Minn., in 1894. He married just before entering this field, where he remained until 1899, when he went to West Africa as a missionary. In 1903, he returned to America for a needed rest, but after a few months recreation, he with his wife once more went back to his work in Africa, where he contracted African fever from which disease he never recovered.

A very full account of his life and work may be found in Woman's Evangelist, Feb. 1905, published in Dayton, Ohio. No children.

Lorenzo U. Todd[7], (Eli[6], Solomon[5], James[4], James[3], Samuel[2], Christopher[1]) born Nov. 16, 1832, died Feb. 7, 1906, married in Elgin, Minn., March 3, 1859, Nellie, daughter of Hiram and Adassa (Wilson) Preston, of New York, who was born Aug. 31, 1836, she having moved to Minnesota a year or two prior to her marriage. Her older sister accompanied her to Minnesota but later she removed to Walla Walla, Wash. Mrs. Todd died March 14, 1906.

"He had a little better educational advantages than his elder brothers (Addison and Dexter J.) having finished his studies at an academy. He engaged in teaching for a short time, one term being in the west after his removal thither. He came to Elba (Minn.) in April 1855, with his elder brother Addison and made claim to one quarter section of Government land in section eight, on which his home has ever been. Additions have enlarged his farm to 264 acres; it is finely improved, with good buildings, etc., and its proprietor diversifies his interests by raising stock as well as grain. His premises are admirably adapted for stock raising, the North branch of the Whitewater furnishing an abundance of living water and its valley a wealth of pasturage.

"In religion, Mr. Todd was a Universalist; in politics he has always been a democrat; was elected Justice of the Peace in 1857, being the first in the township; he was town treasurer in 1859-61; overseer of the poor in early days; member town board in 1875, and chairman of that body and Justice in 1883."

The later years of his life were passed quietly in his old home, his younger son assuming control and operating the farm under his fathers directions. In disposition and character, his equal would be hard to find, and his love for home found him constantly there, where a warm welcome was extended to his friends and acquaintances.

He passed his childhood days in West Chesterfield, Mass., where he was born. When he was about twenty-one years of age, he hired out to Mr. Moody who owned and operated a large farm and tannery located in Roberts Meadow which is a part of Northampton, Mass. The first two years or so of his married life, he passed in West Farms, also a part of Northampton, Mass., after which, he returned to Roberts Meadow and purchased the place where his wife was born, buying out the other heirs. He was very shrewd in his business ventures, and became a very successful farmer. Besides operating the farm, he had charge of all the roads in the western half of the town. At another time, he had the charge of some of the construction work on the first reservoir built by the town.

It is told that when he started out in life at the age of twenty-one, he had just three cents in his pocket, and all he was worth at the time of his death, he had accumulated from his own efforts and with his good wifes assistance, besides having brought up a family of eight children.

Ora B. Todd[7], (Bela[6], Caleb[5], Gideon[4], Gideon[3], Michael[2], Christopher[1]) born Dec. 20, 1808, in Salisbury, N. Y., died Feb. 9, 1889, in San Jacinto, Cal., married Oct. 1832, Lorinda, daughter of Luke and Lucia Wolcott, who was born Oct. 27, 1810, died Oct. 19, 1885, in Santa Paula, Calif.

They removed from Panama, Chautauqua County, N. Y., to Santa Paula, Calif., in March 1884, whence they seem to have moved to Santa Jacinto, where he died.

Mr. Todd was a good reader of music, which he taught some in the old fashioned way; a fine violinist and a most excellent player on that very unmusical instrument called fife. He was an enthusiastic member of the military band in Stockton, N. Y., which was a great help during the civil war and political campaigns. He enlisted for service in the civil war, but was refused because of age and physical inability to serve.

He was wounded severely, sustaining a shattered knee at the battle of Antietam, and as soon as he was able, he was granted a furlough, and went home on crutches, with a limb out of shape badly but cheerful and full of hope. Arriving there he would lay on the lounge, his mother would massage and press gently on the crooked limb, which slowly began to yield to her skillful and faithful treatment. One day while performing this duty, she suddenly said "Martillus, if I save and straighten your limb, what will you do, go back?" His prompt reply was, "yes mother, I shall go back." His mother was loyal to her country, though her answer belied her words said, " I do not know about that Martillus, perhaps I better not straighten your limb." But her mothers heart compelled her to work faithfully until he was able to rejoin his regiment, and some months afterwards was killed instantly, in action, one bullet going through his heart, another cutting the great artery of the neck. Great was the consternation when the sad news reached his people at home, and filled them with anxiety as to the safety of his brother, Hollis, who was still at the front.

Edwin R. Todd[7], (Thomas Jefferson[6], Caleb[5], Gideon[4], Gideon[3], Michael[2], Christopher[1]) born Oct. 10, 1833, in Jamestown, N. Y., died Feb. 16, 1910, in Plattsmouth, Neb., married, Sept. 8, 1861, Mary E. Thomas, who was born Nov. 1, 1844, in Grant County, Ind., died Dec. 5, 1912, in Plattsmouth, Neb. She was a sister of ex-Senator Samuel L. Thomas, who is now (1910) living in Long Beach, Cal.

Mr. Todd was a very well known and highly esteemed citizen of the community in which he lived. He had lived in Plattsmouth, Neb., since 1857, when he first arrived in that region and took up a block of land in the west part of the town and there he passed his remaining years and where he was living at the time of his death. He was a most estimable man and had a great number of friends throughout that section.

His early days were spent under the home roof where the most Christian surroundings existed and where was inculcated into him, that Christian spirit which so characterized him in after life. The house in which he was born still stands in Jamestown, N. Y. His father was a minister of the Christian or Campbellite faith and the young son adopted this faith as his own at an early age. After spending his boyhood with his parents in New York, he went west to the state of Indiana, where he resided for a brief time before going to Plattsmouth. At the age of twenty-five he had left Indiana for good and had cast his fortune with the new prairie territory of Nebraska. Here he laid the foundation to his future success and here he reared his family, six children lived to maturity and two others died young.

In politics, Mr. Todd was a Republican and had taken a deep interest in the politics of the country. He was one of the original Republicans who stood for the policies of the party from it's formation in the fifties and to the end he had adhered closely to those principles. He had been many times honored by his party with seats in conventions and was generally recognized as a wheel-horse of the organization.

Wallace Beri Todd[7], (Beri M.[6], Melicu[5], Gideon[4], Gideon[3], Michael[2], Christopher[1]) born May 8, 1833, in Bristol, Conn., died Feb., 1914, in Ridgely, Maryland, aged about eighty. Married Emma Green.

He was of a sanguine temperament, a bright, sunny disposition, and with good health, he appeared a much younger man. Optimistic in his views, he anticipated with undaunted energy and courage, a very happy old age in his new home and its surroundings.

At an early age, he took a trip nearly around the world, visiting many important places. On his return, he went into the mining district of California, where he mined for gold for two years, at the end of which time he returned to his old home, and later engaged in the manufacture of inks and perfumery, with the late A. W. Harrison, of Philadelphia, Penn., while in connection with this business, they conducted a retail store in New York City.

At the breaking out of the civil war, he enlisted in the 82nd regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Militia, later on he became its quartermaster with the rank of Lieutenant. Mrs. Todd was with him in the forward movement of the army from Frederick City, Maryland, to Warrington, Virginia, and spent the winter of 1863-64, in camp with him on the Rappahannock river, near Brandy Station, Va., where he was promoted to the office of commissary of subsistence of the Reserve Artillery of the army of the Potomac, with the rank of Captain.

At the close of the war he returned to Philadelphia, where he resumed his old business at which he continued until the year 1901.

He was an active member of G. A. R., Meade Post No. 1, of Philadelphia, Penn. Gen. Ulysses S. Grant, was also a member of the same post. At the death of General Grant, he was appointed on a committee of twelve, to arrange for the funeral and burial services. This committee also served as honorary pall-bearers, walking on either side of the casket when it was taken to the tomb on Riverside Drive, New York, N. Y.

Seeking a new home for the benefit of his two grandsons in an agricultural district, Mr. Todd after traveling through Florida and not finding what just suited his ideas for a business life for them, at last settled upon Ridgely, Md., with the benefits of the fine new place for them to locate, which also pleased the parents of the boys, they soon removed thither.

After their marriage they made their home in the same house where Mr. Todd had been born twenty-three years before and there in the same home the three oldest children were born. For eleven years they resided at Homer, N. Y., and then in the spring of 1869, they moved to Iowa and settled on the farm west of the town (Alden) where the two youngest children were born and it was while living there that the son Ernest died. In the spring of 1892, Mr. and Mrs. Todd decided to quit farm-

He is a graduate of Amherst College and a descendant of the celebrated divine, Jonathan Edwards. After graduation he was appointed to a position at the Naval Observatory, Washington, D. C. He was afterwards appointed Prof. of Astronomy and Director of the Observatory at Amherst, Mass., and also Prof. of Astronomy and Higher Mathematics at Smith College, Northampton, Mass. He received the degree of Ph. D. and has been placed in charge of eight scientific expeditions, including, among others, those relating to the transit of Venus, the study of Mars, and eclipses of the sun.

Prof. Todd being made chief of numerous astronomical expeditions, Mrs. Todd began to accompany her husband to many and unusual parts of the world. Spending several months in Europe in 1885, they went in 1887, to Japan, Prof. Todd conducting thither a scientific expedition to observe the eclipse of Aug. 19th. Several other expeditions intervening, they returned again to the flowery kingdom in 1896, sailing there in the schooner yatch Coronet, and making observations of the eclipse of Aug. 29th, from the extreme northern part of the empire, bordering on the Sea of Okhotsk, among the hairy Ainus, aborigines of Japan. Mrs. Todd, on this occasion, reached a point farther north in the Japanese possessions than any foreign woman had ever attained. And here she made special study, ethnological and otherwise, of the Ainu. In 1900, Prof. Todd was once more in charge of an eclipse expedition; she accompanying him to Barbary in northern Africa, making headquarters at the rarely visited city of Tripoli, where a wonderful view of the sun's corona (May 28th) was observed through the cloudless desert air. Here she made a study of desert life, women in the harems and Roman remains. In 1901, Prof. Todd conducted an expedition to a small island (Singkep) off the east coast of Sumatra, where the longest eclipse ever observed occurred on May 18th. On this occasion a complete circuit of the world was made, going via Atlantic and Mediterranean and returning by the Pacific, visiting on the way, Borneo, Siam, the Philippines, China, Japan, and the Hawaiian Islands. In 1905, Tripoli was once more the scene of an eclipse when both took an active part in its operations. In 1907, Prof. Todd conducted an expedition (taking with him the great 18-inch Amherst equatorial telescope) to the elevated pampa of Chili, for the purpose of studying Mars at opposition, in that exceptional steady air; and on this occasion Mrs. Todd made a special study, in addition to the main purpose of the expedition, of the remains of old Inca civilization, especially in Peru and at high regions among the Andes.

Each are the authors of numerous publications on astronomical subjects, and write articles relating to astronomy for various magazines.

Mrs. Todd gives drawing room talks, and for private Schools, Clubs and Colleges, on popular astronomy, travel and literary subjects, some fifty to eighty each season. She founded the Amherst Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, and founded also the Amherst Historical Society, of which she is President.

Orrin Kirtland Todd[7], (William[6], Simeon[5], Joel[4], Ithamar[3], Michael[2], Christopher[1]) born Dec. 6, 1833, died March 14, 1879, married Ellen Jane, daughter of Elhanan and Ellen (Kelly) Dewey, who was born June 23, 1840, died Oct. 23, 1908.

Mr. Todd was born under the friendly shelter of the ancestral roof at the middle-eastern slope of Mount Carmel not many miles from New Haven, Conn. Several generations of the family had succeeded to the same spot of ground, and three had used the same dwelling with its broad doors, easy ascending staircases and immense fire-places, its fine breadth of exterior and its great and hospitable rooms. This manor was maintained by a large acreage of well-tilled, rich and productive lands covering an extensive scope of both the mountain-side and of the deep loamed valley below, and had yielded ample incomes to all so fortunate as to be within the charmed circle of this potent colonial patronymic.

Kirtland, as he was called, inherited the genius of his people for both agriculture and skill in mechanics. He also had some apitude for business, but more than all else was he a patriot and in a quiet determined manner always stood for the Constitution and the Flag; and these convictions he gave liberally to his six sons and three daughters. His father's intense spiritual insight, for William Manning was a great christian and a cultured gentleman of unlimited hospitalities, which was also Kirtland's pre-natal legacy from out a splendid well-lived and nobly adorned past to this active new group of boys and girls as will be seen from the following records which have been modestly and loyally verified.

Orrin Kirtland Todd was early in his married life associated socially and in mechanics at Quinipiac—then an important industrial village with its own church and school on the confines of Wallingford, North Haven and Hamden—with J. N. Pierpont, afterwards member of the Legislature, Robert Wallace, David Stevens and William D. Hall. These men launched out from there and each made his individual mark in the use of his initiative, two of them becoming world-famous.

Mr. Todd's war record was with Company B., of the Twenty-seventh Regiment, Connecticut Volunteers and he was honorably discharged at the expiration of his term of service. The war hardships so debilitated and undermined his powers of endurance, however, that he lived to be but 46 years of age, passing away March 14, 1879, after an illness of only four days, and a company of life-long friends from among whom Roswell Q. Morse, Jonathan Neugent, Dennis M. Morris and Elijah D. Russell—all well-known citizens of Wallingford and of certain and peculiar prominence—sorrowfully and lovingly observed the final honors at his burial. His pathway had not been strewn with roses but he is believed to have done the best he could and he held the friendship of the multitude. Several farms had yielded luxuriantly to his management, his handiwork enriched the output of four of the great manufacturing plants of the state, yet he had spent all his life, excepting his war-days, in his native county, three of whose noted towns—Wallingford, Hamden and Cheshire—cornered in the front yard of his home.

His faithful wife, Ellen Jane Dewey Todd, a tireless, ambitious, noble-hearted and accomplished christian woman of Cymbri-Celtic, (Welsh-Irish) extraction stood loyally by him in every trying hour and with him was glad in his successes. She was totally absorbed in a supreme regard for her husband and his children, all of whom she had born to him, to whose welfare she unceasingly gave all the thoughts of her heart. She survived him 29 years and to her invincible energy is due much of the personal effect which flowed out of the collective life of this family of Todds. Her contribution has been a high value, and her passing away October 23, 1908, was profoundly mourned. From very early in life she was an earnest member of the Congregational Church, and her pastor officiated at her interment.

Like his father he had hosts of friends who, for many years, could not give him up and who still lament his strange vanishing.

She had equal opportunity with Frances Adelaide, in the matter of education and cultivation in music. Most of her life has been spent in Conn. These two younger sisters have been together in not only their early domestic years, but because of an extreme fondness each has always felt for the other have tried to be as much associated as possible in every way. Consequently they live but a few doors from each other still, and move together in much the same community and social circles. Each are brunettes and their lively wit and cordial manner has given them a universal acquaintance in the old home town.

Edward Tompkins was an active member of Co. K., 2nd Regiment C. N. G., and was discharged a Sergeant. He is said to have been a most excellent shot at the target practice on the rifle range and as unusually good in drill work. He has followed the silver industry most of his life

Each is member of the same chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star and are active in everything that will advance community progress. They are each skilled in the use of the key board and have pleasant voices, Nellie singing in church choirs for many years. As up-to-date women they feel a most delightful, conscious responsibility in all affairs of the public interest, both local and National, and have proved themselves true daughters of their fathers's in all matters constitutional and in a free expression of patriotic opinion.

PINE

Harriet A. Todd[8], (Elnathan[7], Elnathan[6], John[5], John[4], John[3], John[2], Christopher[1]) born March 22, 1861, married Dec. 27, 1893, Sullivan Moulton Pine, who is descended from a member of the family, who received a grant of land on "Pearsall's Hill" on Long Island. A part of this land was exchanged for land on King Street, Port Chester, N. Y., about 1744, which is now owned and occupied by the above mentioned descendant. The original settlers in this country of the Pine family was James and Samuel who came to this country in their own vessels. The name Moulton came by way of Mr. Pine's mother, who was a descendant of that family, they being among the early settlers of Massachusetts.

Mrs. Pine has been deeply interested in the completion of a Todd Genealogy and it was due to her efforts that the writer was enabled to get the data concerning her branch of the family.

Seth Henry Todd[8], (Isaac[7], Moses[6], Hezekiah[5], Caleb[4], Samuel[3], Samuel[2], Christopher[1]) born Nov. 23, 1833, in Wakeman, Ohio, died May 2, 1914, in Wakeman, O., married March 18, 1860, Martha Elizabeth, daughter of Cyrus and Mary Ann (Burrill) Strong, who was born Aug., 1836.

He was a farmer and stock raiser all his life. He attended Oberlin College; was a lecturer at Farmer's Institutes; was president of the Wakeman Bank from the time of its foundation in 1892, until his death.

The following is Mr. Todd's obituary:

Seth Henry Todd was a pioneer child, born Nov. 22, 1833, in the early days of the settlement of the Western Reserve. He lived his entire life, in Wakeman, Ohio, with the exception of eighteen months, which was spent near Topeka, Kansas, at the time of the border troubles.

He obtained his education in the schools of Wakeman Township and Oberlin College. He was for a short time a successful teacher.

He was the second child in a family of five children of Isaac and Fanny (Booth) Todd, who were charter members of the Second Congregational Church, of Wakeman, also members of the First Congregational Church. This early environment may in a measure account for his sterling integrity of character. His children's and grandchildren's earliest recollections of him are his stories woven about those early days.

Mr. Todd joined the church in 1850, but felt he had experienced a change of heart at the early age of 11 years. All his years were so closely associated with his church that it seemed a part of his life, and in a letter written two weeks before his death, he spoke of the last Communion Sabbath, when twenty-five young people were taken into the church, as the happiest day in his life, and that his faith in God was renewed.

He served the church in the capacity of trustee for half a century, being elected to this position in 1864, and for more than a quarter of a century he was superintendent of the Sabbath-school. At the time of his death he was deacon. He gave of all he had, money, time and energy in the erecting of the present Congregational Church edifice, being chairman of the building committee at that time.

Mr. Todd was a progressive, scientific farmer. He was a member of the Grange and at their meetings received and gave incentive to the betterment of agricultural and stock interests. This activity has given him prominence among stock men.

He gained a wide acquaintance with men in his public and institute work, having lectured in every county in Ohio and in Indiana, Michigan, Wisconsin, Pennsylvania and Maryland. In this work his good cheer and comradship won him many friends who mourn his loss.

As President of the Wakeman Bank Co., since its organization he has earnestly tried to merit the confidence placed in him.

In temperance reform he was active and used his influence to overthrow the evil.

Mr. Todd was a man of years who had never grown old in spirit, he was fond of children and young people, and interested himself in all lines of work for the advancement and greater good of the communities interests.

He was an inspiration to those in his home, and all with whom he came in contact, to live a complete well rounded life.

Mr. Todd had so often expressed the desire to leave this life without extended illness, when he ceased to be active, and as he expressed it, useless. God was very good to him and on May 2, 1914, at the noon hour, after only three short hours of pain, and being administered to, he turned himself on his side and quietly breathed his life away. It did not seem like death, but that he had been taken.

To err is human, to love divine, and through his great love for mankind and the influence of eighty years God gave him may he still live in our midst.

This veteran farmer and swine breeder died suddenly of heart trouble, at his home near Wakeman, Huron County, Ohio, aged 81 years. For a quarter of a century previous to about a decade ago Mr. Todd was foremost among Ohio swine breeders and exhibitors, having developed the Todd Improved Chester White. Increasing years did not extinguish his interest in the breed which he did so much to develope, for he continued to raise hogs to the very last. He was also a sheep breeder and exhibitor of note. As a farmer's institute lecturer for many years, he interested and helped hundreds of Ohio farmers to grow better hogs and to put the business on a better basis. For a great many years he was a regular and valued contributor to the Ohio farmer. Mr. Todd is survived by Mrs. Todd, four daughters and two sons, one daughter having died many years ago. One of the sons, Charles, now owns the farm settled by his grandfather Todd. His other son, Albert, owns the first farm purchased by his father, the latter having bought a smaller one in his later years, which he managed and worked every day up to May 2, 1914.

Woodward Hezekiah Todd[8], (Kneeland[7], Moses[6], Hezekiah[5], Caleb[4], Samuel[3], Samuel[2], Christopher[1]) born May 28, 1837, died Jan. 18, 1900, married May 17, 1877, Sophia C. Kline, who was born March 4, 1855, died Dec. 25, 1905.

Mr. Todd was born in Wakeman, O., and died at his home in Florence, Erie County, O.

Below is Mr. Todd's obituary:

At the age of eight years he moved with his parents to the home he occupied. This farm has been his residence over 54 years. In his younger days, he was a student in Oberlin College, and about that time he taught school during the winter months. He was a great fancier of poultry and pet stock, and began to gather fine specimens in 1868. His first exhibition was at the State Fair held in Toledo, Ohio, and there he won nearly all the prizes for which he tried. His next exhibit was at the Erie County Fair, at Sandusky, O., and nearly all the premiums he showed for went his way. He took his collection to the first great poultry show in northern O., at Cleveland and met in competition, the largest breeders and fanciers in the United States. While he carried off many prizes, together with the sweepstakes, he was not satisfied, and at that show he began to strengthen his collection by buying the first pair of Toulouse geese ever in Ohio, for which he paid $35. He also made many other valuable additions. I well remember what he said about the time, that certain fanciers in Illinois were receiving 100 letters a day and said, "I believe I can do the same," and he did do even better than that.

In the '70's he was called to Indianapolis, Ind., to a great show for the west, and to deliver an address before the fanciers of Indiana, both of which he did. Just after this, there was to be another poultry show at Buffalo, N. Y. This was open to the world, and he laid his plans to win and carry the banner that had always been kept in the east, back to the west with him, and as an illustration of his ability as a judge of fancy poultry, I will give one little incident. At the Indianapolis show, out of that vast collection, he selected and bought one bird of the Light Brahma variety, and this one he took with his collection, which had by this time grown to be almost a show of itself, to the Buffalo show. This bird won first prize of $15, and sold it to a man in Canada for $100, in gold. He came with many prizes from this show and truly bringing the banner with him for after this, his sales were as great east as west. He imported seven ducks and two geese from England, the charges on this lot being $95, but he often said the mention of this importation in different poultry and other papers paid him well for his expense and trouble. He made an exhibition of his poultry at the Centennial Exposition held at Philadelphia in 1876, and won the prize for the best collection, of $100, given by the State of Pennsylvania, also many medals and prizes from the association. His shipments extended to every state and territory of the United States, Canada and South America. The improvements in poultry that have taken place all over this broad land for the last thirty years from the old common fowl to the fine Braham's, Plymouth Rocks and many other kinds of both land and water fowls, can be traced largely to the skilful management of this one of the earliest pioneers in the business. He partly discontinued the business about 1880 and took up fancy cattle with which he was successful. He took quite a part in literary work and many of his writings have found their way into the various publications and periodicals. He, with the aid of others, started and edited the "Poultry Nation," a live poultry paper of the '70's. He assisted in making the American Standard of Excellence, a book which, if not, should be in every poultry fanciers home. He was a life member of the American Poultry Association, also a member of many poultry and other societies.

Previous to his first sickness which was more than two years before he died, he was called to many places to deliver addresses at horticultural and institute meetings. He was a strong temperance man and in that cause was never idle. He was ever ready to assist the poor and unfortunate and no one was turned away from his home that came asking for rest and refreshment. His religious views can readily be found in the following lines which he wrote on the death of his mother. "At the dawn of day, mother closed her eyes in death forever to the scenes of this life but awoke to behold the dawn of a fairer morning in the sweet life of the Great Beyond."

The funeral services were conducted by Rev. J. F. Lewis, at the old home and the remains were laid to rest in the family lot in Maple Grove Cemetery, Vermillion, Ohio.

The following biographical sketch was taken from "North Haven Annals," by Sheldon B. Thorpe.

"He has always followed the profession of his father, grandfather and quite likely his more distant ancestors. Although he has managed his farm and dairy business with the most scrupulous attention, he has found time and opportunity to serve his townsmen in many ways. With a single exception (Andrew F. Austin) he can count more years of public service than any other citizen. He was elected Grand Juror in 1864, and has filled that delicate responsibility continually since, with honor to himself and credit to the peace of the community. Also, since 1875, he has served as town treasurer. The duties of a selectman are perfectly familiar to him, and in 1883 he was made a member of the General Assembly. Patriotism, temperance and religion have always found in him an ardent supporter."

He lived in North Haven, Conn.

Mr. Todd, when less than year old was taken by his parents in Sept., 1838, to Nottawa Township, St. Joseph County, Mich., where he attended the county school and then two winters in High School in Sturgis, Mich.

He has been a farmer most of his life, and at the present time (1913) has a ranch near Williston, North Dakota.

He inherited from his mother, a college bred woman, a fondness for history and literature, and the ability to write and converse with interest. His father was a man of sterling integrity, universally admired for his honesty and justice. Both parents were great Bible students and brought up their family in strict religious observance. He is a Deacon in the Congregational Church in Williston, N. Dak.

He has been a Prohibitionist the greater part of his life and neither he nor any of his children drink or smoke.

He enlisted in Company A., 11th Michigan Volunteer Infantry, Aug. 24, 1861, and was mustered out of service, Feb. 24, 1863, at Murfreesboro, Tenn. He has always been loyal to the G. A. R. and for over thirty years was secretary of the 11th Michigan Infantry, which held reunions annually in Southern Michigan. He still retains an erect, soldierly carriage though growing slower in step.

Mrs. Todd's father was a M. E. minister and was born in Polksville, N. Y., six miles east of Seneca Lake, N. Y., April 5, 1805. He was of Dutch, English and Scotch descent, and a descendant of the Wickes of Scotland. Mrs. Todd's mother, Sarah Burdick Grey was born Jan. 13, 1813, in New York City. She traced her ancestry back to Lady Jane Grey, the "nine day Queen" of England. She inherited a great desire for reading and became a thorough student. She first attended school in Reynoldsville, N. Y., and later a district school in Michigan. She was a student at the High School in Sturgis, Mich., for two or three winters, and later completed a four year Chautauqua Course, while her children were growing up. She began teaching when she was but fifteen years old and continued at it off and on until three years after her marriage, her work being highly spoken of. She was a great worker in the W. C. T. U. and in the Presbyterian Church. Also a Good Templar.

A severe attack of Pneumonia and chronic Bronchitis left her an invalid and for the last half dozen years she has been confined to the house very largely.

Albert May Todd[8], (Alfred[7], Caleb[6], Caleb[5], Stephen[4], Samuel[3], Samuel[2], Christopher[1]) born June 3, 1850, in Nottawa, Mich., married Jan. 23, 1878, Augusta Margaret, daughter of John and Mary (Engle) Allman, who was born Sept. 20, 1855.

Mr. Todd was born on a farm near the village of Nottawa, St. Joseph County, Mich., the youngest of ten children, all of whom were supported upon forty-five acres of cleared land, which was the total area that was practical for tillage on his father's eighty acre farm. Their lives were necessarily plain, but extremely happy. For the first few years after he entered school, he walked one and one-half miles to the "red school house" and afterwards a little school house was built upon their own farm, which he attended for a number of years, working upon the farm when not in school. Afterwards, he studied at the High School at Sturgis, seven miles distant, where he graduated. Meantime when eighteen years old he engaged with his next older brother, Oliver, in an experiment in the growing and distillation of peppermint, which started with a very few acres only at first, but as it appeared that the crude methods thus far employed in the business were susceptible of material improvement, and his brother desiring that he should assume his (Oliver's) interest in the business, Mr. Todd set to work at once, to invent new appliances, and to perfect improved processes. He thus was able to make the business successful, and has continued it to the present time, the business having constantly grown until the A. M. Todd Company, of which he is the president, operates and controls an area of approximately 10,000 acres devoted largely to the growing of peppermint, spearmint and other aromatic and medicinal plants, and to the extraction of volatile oils, alkaloids, etc., which these plants contain. This company has become the most extensive essential oil producers of the world.

His father was, in politics, a republican, and Mr. Todd's first vote was cast with that party both from environment and principle, but soon after it became apparent that certain interests had taken possession of the machinery of the party for private gain, and the prohibition party then being in process of formation and its principles being in accord with his ideas, he joined the ranks of the party, and voted its ticket for about twenty years. During much of this time he studied the question of public ownership of public utilities and the issue of the nation's money directly by the government. These principles which others endorsed with him were included in the platform of the prohibition party. But in 1896, the party rejected them, and Mr. Todd, feeling that social justice could not be secured by prohibition alone, left the prohibition party and united with other citizens in organizing the national party which included all of these principles in its platform. Having been nominated by this party as its candidate for Congress, and being endorsed by three other parties advocating similar principles, he was elected as the Representative of the Third District of Michigan to Congress. During his term of service in the House of Representatives, he took special interest in the affairs of the railroads and of other public utilities which by their nature are necessary to the lives and happiness of all the people, the operation of which he looked upon as one of the most natural and necessary functions of government.

His interest in public ownership increasing, he arranged to make a thorough study of its operations in foreign countries, and accordingly sailed in May, 1912, visiting thirteen countries of Europe, returning in August, 1913, being more than ever impressed with the fact that public ownership is the only way to secure economic justice and political purity. During his trip, he had the honor and pleasure of being entertained by men high in the councils of foreign governments who extended every possible facility for investigation, the opportunities for which he gladly made use of, so that in addition to securing a vast array of original and official data, he was able to personally take over one thousand photographs showing the railroads, telephone, parcel post, gas works, electric plants, water works, schools, hospitals, banks, theaters, etc., etc., all under public ownership, either national or municipal. The results of these investigations he has already placed in part before the American people.

Soon after his return from Europe the Public Ownership League of America was organized largely through his initiative. He became its president and has since been repeatedly re-elected to this office, the last election, prior to the writing of this sketch, having been held in November, 1919. The general office of this League is in Chicago, but during the years 1918-19, Mr. Todd maintained the president's office in Washington, D. C., where special attention was given to aiding the government in working out the railroad and other national utility problems in the interest of democracy.

He is a member of twenty-six various other scientific, commercial and political associations, a list of which may be found in the issue of "Who's Who" for 1919.

Mr. Todd early acquired a love of literature and the fine arts, and now possesses a large and rare art museum and library of books in all branches of literature, history, political economy, the fine arts, as well as first editions of ancient classics, rare books from the presses of the world's greatest printers, and wonderful hand-painted bird books, etc. Twenty-five rooms in his home and office building are filled with the museum and library.

His permanent home address is Kalamazoo, Mich.

He has since renewed his acquaintance with a portion of the country seen in his former trip, as he spent a year and a half in France as a Lieutenant in the American Expeditionary Forces in the Great War. He sailed for France on Christmas Day, 1917, and upon his arrival there attended the Field Artillery School at Saumur, France, and later at the Tractor Artillery School at St. Maur. His qualifications were such that he was retained as Acting Adjutant to the Major in charge of the Training Center for Tractor Artillery at Libourne, where he was engaged in instructional work and in authority as Judge Advocate in military trials when the war closed. Later he was transfered to the Staff and thence to the 41st Coast Artillery. He arrived in America, January 25, 1919, and was demobilized at Camp Dix, February 27, 1919. He has since renewed his active connection with A. M. Todd Company.

George Brainard Todd[8], (Caleb[7], Caleb[6], Caleb[5], Stephen[4], Samuel[3], Samuel[2], Christopher[1]) born April 30, 1834, in Marcellus, Onondaga County, N. Y., died Sept. 20, 1874, in Pensacola, Fla., he was twice married, first, Oct. 7, 1857, Eliza M., daughter of Timothy M. and Elizabeth Ann (Swain) Todd, who was born Oct. 7, 1831, died Nov. 1, 1864. For her ancestry, see No. 577. He married second, April 7, 1866, Ella S. Latsch, who was born March 6, 1839.

Mr. Todd graduated from the Onondaga Valley Academy and the Albany Medical School, and was thereafter duly licensed as a physician. In 1861, he was commissioned in the 12th N. Y. Vol. Militia, as Assistant Surgeon. Later he was commissioned in the same capacity in the U. S. Navy and served through the war. Shortly after the war, he was again commissioned in the Navy, and died of yellow fever while attending the sick, during an epidemic at Pensacola Navy Yard, in 1874. He was then Acting Past Assistant Surgeon. For some years he practiced medicine while a civilian, in Onondaga County, N. Y., but the greater part of his professional life was devoted to the service.

The following was taken from the Baltimore Sun:

"Died in Pensacola, Fla., acting Surgeon, George Brainard Todd, M. D. He was born in Marcellus, Onondaga County, N. Y., and graduated at the University of New York, at Albany. He also received collegiate diplomas from other schools of medicine, the last from the University of Maryland, in which State he resumed practice after the termination of the war of the rebellion. In the early part of these troubles, he volunteered as an assistant surgeon in the army, and was associated with the accomplished Surgeon and Medical Director, Tripler, from whom he received most gratifying notice of professional services and manly worth. His self possession in danger, his devotion to duty, and his patience in the surgery of resection, with the desire to save limbs to the wounded, commanded the enconiums of his superiors, and the gratitude of the unfortunate. Doctor Todd was in many sharp engagements in the field, and in the Navy, during the closing years of the civil war, in practical ironclad service. He not only gave his full professional abilities to each branch of our defense, with the pure patriotism of duty, but he combined those with the Samaritan tenderness of the true Physician, and when the cloud of war hovered over the seizure of the Virginius, he again offered in sacrifice, domestic happiness and pecuniary profit, and volunteered, without reserve, for duty. An ornament to his God-like profession, he has fallen in the path of duty, and in the hearts of those who knew him best, there will be deep grief, that so bright an example of manhood has been withdrawn from earth. His character was warmly appreciated and beloved by the humblest in official place. The lowest in intellect, and the most obtuse in perception, recognized him as an honest, faithful man in the discharge of duty and the obligations of friendship. But "Tis not all of death to die," and in this is our comfort and our hope."

Y., and became a member of Company B., 3rd New York Cavalry, and saw much hard service until early in 1862, when he was discharged for physical disability. He survived the very severe illness incurred in the service, however, and after the war moved with his parents to Spencerport, Monroe County, N. Y., where they purchased a farm. There he lived until 1908, when he retired and moved to Rochester, N. Y.

George Todd[8], (Ira[7], Jehiel[6], Stephen[5], Stephen[4], Samuel[3], Samuel[2], Christopher[1]) born Feb. 3, 1815, in Hartwick, N. Y., died in 1906, married Jan. 6, 1842, Alice Orne, daughter of Samuel and Abigail (Low) Davis, who was born June 7, 1818, in Weare, N. H. She was a sister of his brother Washington Todd's wife, Mary Low Davis. Her mother, Abigail Low was a cousin of Hon. Seth Low, Ex-Mayor of New York City.

Mr. Todd went to St. Louis, Mo., to establish the business of flour milling, in 1835. Two of his brothers, Charles and Washington, came later and were associated with him. They were the pioneers in that thriving business, and the firm became known over all the great country tributary to St. Louis. On this venture to St. Louis, he left New York City by boat for New Orleans, thence up the Mississippi to his destination. He took with him, a good supply of mill materials, including burr stones, then used exclusively in the best mills. Later he imported these direct from France, also the silk bolting cloths. On his way up the Mississippi, the boat he was on was caught, with others, in the ice a little above the confluence of the Ohio and Mississippi Rivers. He made his way to St. Louis on horseback on the Illinois side, crossing the river at St. Louis in an open yawl through floating ice. The pioneers were a sturdy stock. He lived to see his 91st year, was seldom sick, had no bad habits, was in every way abstemious and a healthy liver. Of such was the nobility of our land. Fortunate are those of such wholesome and useful ancestry.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Todd were members of large families, he being one in a family of eleven, she being in a family of twelve, there being six sisters and five half brothers.

Immediately after graduation in New York, he went to Vienna, Austria, which was then the greatest medical center of the world. He remained there two years, then returned to St. Louis, and immediately started upon his professional career; became Professor of Anatomy in the Missouri Medical College, at St. Louis, Mo., which was the first medical college to be established west of the Mississippi River. It is now incorporated in the Medical Dept. of Washington University. On account of his health, he was obliged to give up his practice and teaching. He secured the passage of an ordinance opening entrance into their hospital practice as internes, only through competitive examinations, a much needed reform, also, through the legislature, secured a statute legalizing the dissection of human bodies. Up to that time, such necessary study was effective contrary to law. He was active in putting their Humane Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals on an active basis, which it has ever since maintained, and many other activities in which he was deeply interested.

of the same material, with holes bored and sticks inserted to hold it in place. The seats also were of the same material. Sawed lumber, when used, had to be bought in Chicago, Ill., and hauled with teams to Kansas, which would be quite a distance to haul with horses and with the roads they must have had in those days.

In Biographical Review, published in 1895, article of Augustus H. Todd, the leading men of Delaware County, N. Y., there is a very ridiculous fable about Samuel Todd the Revolutionary war soldier. Samuel Todd, according to Clarissa, his daughter, lived in Litchfield County, Conn. In 1800, she was born there; in 1802, the family moved to Middletown, Delaware County, N. Y.; there were six sons and four daughters from 22 down to 2 years; three of them taught school. Now, as his wife, Mary Dudley Todd had 10 children, she could not have been the "brave young wife" of the fable. And as her father, Capt. John E. Dudley owned the Dudley mansion in Wallingford, Conn., it is not likely Mary Dudley Todd was poor as the fable tells about. Mary Dudley Todd's mother was a Brockett and had property. The fables bride and groom had ten children when they moved to New York in 1802, Viz.: John, Samuel, Dudley, Lyman, Dyer, Burr, Mary, Lucinda, Sally and Clarissa, then in 1804, Darling was born and in 1807, Isaac was born. All lived to grow up but Dyer, who died at the age of 22 years.

The above criticism is by Adella Helmershausen.

& Company, dry-goods merchants, their store being on Broadway. He continued in this line of business all of his active business life, the only interruption being during his service in the civil war. He had the misfortune to have had a very disastrous fire which destroyed the building and contents. Fortunately, however, the loss was fully covered by insurance. A peculiar coincidence is related concerning this fire. It is told that an insurance inspector had gone very thoroughly over the premises the very day of the fire and just before leaving he said, "Mr. Todd if everybody kept their premises as carefully as you, the insurance companies would never have to worry about fires." This remark was made only a few minutes before the fire was discovered. Just how the fire started was never learned. After the fire, the firm of Hazen, Todd & Company continued in business some years longer and then dissolved the partnership. Later he managed the wholesale dry-goods business in New York of several Boston firms.

For a number of years he was vestry-man of St. Thomas Church, Fifth Ave., New York City, of which he and Mrs. Todd were members for several years.

Before the Civil War he was a member of Co. A., 7th Regiment, New York Militia, which was one of the first to be called to defend Washington, after Fort Sumpter was fired on. He served in this regiment seven years and was then honorably discharged. During his war service, he became very ill and was sent home incapacitated.

He was a quiet, unostentatious man, devoted to his family and his business and never belonged to organizations of any kind, not even the G. A. R.

accumulated quite a property. The Rev. Mr. Reynolds, her pastor and friend of much of her girlhood, of the First Baptist Church officiated at the wedding.

Mrs. Strauss received a thorough common-school education and became a shipper and later an inspector in the finished goods department, first at Hall and Elton's and afterwards at R. Her children were all born in Wallingford, Ct., but were some years later, confirmed in the Protestant Episcopal Church of Hamden at Centerville.

William Elhanan Manning Todd[8], (Orrin K.[7], William[6], Simeon[5], Joel[4], Ithamar[3], Michael[2], Christopher[1]) born Sept. 13, 1864, married Dec. 25, 1890, Rose Jane Stover of Mount Etna, Iowa.

WRITTEN BY A HUNDRED PENS

William Elhanan Manning Todd had the usual ups and downs of a healthy Connecticut and eastern American boy in matters temporal, but being of a practical, active and vigorous mental makeup which often left him high and dry upon the shores of things far future, where some swiftly rolling psychological tidal-wave would land him away thru the years of coming events, when, in the very nature of things, he would sometimes be compelled to "hold his hosses," "slow down the train," "change the course of his ship," "puncture a tire," or lock his aeroplane to a mountain top and "call a halt" for a time. And while waiting would plan the next move on the tresselboard of the yet unborn days.

For a number of years the writer of this sketch has tried in vain to get bits of his story, being able to secure but little, and even now must be content with articles of his life work which appeared at different times in the periodicals and newspapers throughout the length and breadth of the United States, and from other authentic sources from which the following is eptomized:

The Rev. William E. M. Todd, archaeologist and litterateur, is a typical New Englander, and altho spending much of his youth in Virginia was educated in Connecticut schools.

Always an inveterate reader from his earliest days, besides his careful studies he devoured two whole libraries, one private and one public, a later invaluable asset in his chosen vocations. He was ordained in 1890, and has preached and lectured from over five hundred popular platforms and leading pulpits in twenty-nine of the states and the Dominion of Canada; addressed twenty State Assemblies; four interdenominational gatherings and five National Conventions; was member of and addressed fifty local and international councils; edited four periodicals, issued sixty publications, and over two hundred leading journals have published his work; has addressed forty G. A. R. occasions, ten Independence Days, and has spoken in more than seventy-five places in his native state.

He has lectured at a number of institutions of learning, occupied on special occasions more than seventy-five college town pulpits, held six public discussions and has been tendered over forty public receptions. Some of his best sermons are said to have been on "Power of Choice," Omaha First church, published at Omaha, Creston and Brookfield; "Blessings of Misfortune," published; "Apples of Gold in Pictures of Silver"; "Unity of Religion", published at Charleston; "The Call of the Twentieth Century", published, and "His Sword is Dipped in Heaven", in memoriam of soldiers and sailors lost in the Spanish-American war, on request of the National Monument Committee and published for them. This was a great occasion, the Mayor of the city presiding and the Blue and the Gray veterans present in full-dress uniform. His Alfredian address, commemorating the one thousandth anniversary of the death of England's great formative ruler, King Alfred, was published and widely commented on, and his pulpit theme on "The Sermon that Christ would Preach," while the pastor at Key West, Fla., was said to be "the greatest heard in that city in ten years."

His studies in Arts, Science, Prophecy, Biography and Literature being unusual, continuous, arduous and successful, his archaeological researches being principally in Asiatic, Egyptian and American antiquities, his demonstrations have met with favor. Thrice he has been called to education work. He has been a careful disciple of the interpretation of the Bible in the beauty of Dr. David Swing, the constructiveness of Dr. Lyman Abbott, the optimism of Dr. R. S. Storrs, and the persistent aggressiveness of the Fathers in the cause of applied Christianity, and from willingness to respond to every call he has been styled "a minister of the people." Taught Me," and on the Bible "as a Book of Science," "As the Word of God," "As a literary Work" and "As an Inspiration," at union and interdenominational meetings and from his own pulpit have been commended as most timely and helpful; his untiring interest in civil affairs has been appreciated by municipal, commonwealth and national officers, whose communications of hearty accord have been of great encouragement to his ministry. His prayer at the conclusion of one of our great wars entitled "Thanks For National Peace," was handsomely engrossed and embossed, and sent to the President, the members of the cabinet and also to the Peace Commission and was most cordially acknowleged by each. And at another time he was given the personal thanks of the President and the Secretary of War for his Memorial address in defense of the army in the Philippines.

Contemporaries have mentioned him as a man of unusual scholarly attainments, holding degrees in Art, Law, Science, Theology and Music, with two others pending, he has been indefatigable in his labors in both school and church, as well as in the field of letters, college extension and post graduate work. Association with Learned and Biographical societies supplied inspiration for growing educational enthusiasm, so that even with increasing pulpit endeavors and evangelistic calls, time was found under Divine guidance to help plant schools and to assume college responsibilities, among which a few are mentioned; lectured at Western School for ministers and at Brookfield College, helped to found Mendota College nearly forty years ago, had interest in the founding of the University of Omaha, and Lincoln Memorial University, all strong institutions and doing worthy work. A member of the Co-Educational Association of Virginia; lecturer for the Farmer's Educational and Co-operative Union of America (4,000,000 members), and director of their Virginia State band of 40 pieces. But chiefly individually founding and establishing Central College in Virginia, a corporation with preparatory schools, literary institute, School of Pedagogy, (Normal Training, with Departments of Agriculture and Domestic Science) College of Arts and Sciences, School of Religion and Conservatory of Music, all standard, acknowledged and accredited in the government. In five years funds were secured, buildings constructed and a student body of over 1400 enrolled—an unprecedented result—the assemblies at school and educational affairs sometimes numbering from 1,000 to 6,000. These associated details resulting in many conversions and in much community improvement leads to the strong conviction that with proper liberty and Heaven-led initiative much and lasting good can be doubly productive.

Dr. Todd was admitted to Holy Orders under an exhaustive examination by a foremost body of New England scholars, the clergy of the Rhode Island Association of Othordox Congregational Ministers, in the old white-domed Beneficent Church, Providence, and has observed an unswerving ministry, baptismal waters opening to his service for this sacrament from the Naragansett Bay of the Atlantic Ocean to the far western coast. He feels that the church is more moving and appealing than any other modern activity and that every sensible effort possible should be prayerfully and persistently maintained to effectively bring to the public mind the lasting, enduring qualities of a livable christianity. His whole heart is with the church in all her aggressive, pleasant ways to awaken a more or less lost race from the sin-slumbering of these swiftly flying days.

Qualifications and work attaining degrees were graduate studies, and partly for theses on many themes, for numerous phases of activity in the churches and acknowledged standing in scholarship recognized at different times by eminent schoolmen, statesmen and clergymen of New England, the South and the West, from among whom the several notable signatories below are selected. There have been two calls to the legislature, he was twice appointed postmaster and a Naval Chaplaincy was offered. He edited two national magazines and owned and edited an important southern journal with a wide circulation and was national correspondent for five standard religious periodicals. He was member of the great Eccumenical Council on Foreign Missions in New York City

While pastor with the famous old New Lebanon pulpit, older than the Federal Government, in eastern New York, his first book answering New Testament Critics came off the press. Received strong commendation and was given wide circulation. He coöperated with the mayor of Winchester, England, in the proper observance of the 1000th anniversary of the death of Alfred the Great, (in lieu of the late John Fiske, A.M., LL.B., the great American Historian, whose sudden death made vacant his place on the program). The Albany Journal, The Berkshire Evangel, and The Connecticut Valley Congregationalist, et. al., publishing his historic address.

His memorials have had national consideration. This is the church home of the well known Tilden family, the body of the great Governor, Samuel J. Tilden, lay in State here, and encircling the massive granite base of the monument erected to his memory here, are the famous words of his memorable speech after the presidential election in 1876, "I still believe the people." Seven clergymen have entered the ministry from this pulpit. Men eminent in letters have ministered here. Chief magistrates of the nation have worshiped here. It is near the famous summer resort "Montepoole" of the popular story "Queechy," and the location is called the "Switzerland of America," about which cluster many sacred and beautiful memories of useful men and women on both sides of the ocean. While the Rev. Mr. Todd was pastor here, his son was born and was immediately presented, by the good ladies of the parish, with an expert nurse from the House of Mercy Hospital, at Pittsfield, Mass., and with a sum of money to more than pay for the term of her services. At his Christening in the old church his name included that of his father, his grandfather and his great-grandfather, also that of one of his father's predecessors in the New Lebanon pulpit, the eminent and beloved Rev. Dr. John Todd, so long a New England pastor, and appears on the church register as follows: John William Stover Todd, and he was rocked in the governor Tilden cradle altho he didn't seem to like it very well.

The venerable Pittsfield pastor, the Rev. Dr. John Todd, (See number 284), had been greatly beloved in the New Lebanon parish. He had often preached there on special occasions and, about the year 1860, had rededicated their recently remodeled church edifice—one of the most beautiful in America—and some of his great sentences were so well remembered as to be quoted verbatim 40 years later when the same building had undergone further changes to meet the later needs, and words of tender regard were paid to the revered memory of their former friend and patron of this stanch and worthy, ancient and progressive household of the unyielding and all-pervading Faith of the Divine Christ. Deacon Nelson S. Gates, a stockholder of the Boston and Albany Railroad, one of eastern New York's most prominent and beloved citizens, a profound Christian and scholarly gentleman, said on the above mentioned occasion: "The master spirit at the dedication was the Rev. John Todd, D.D., of Pittsfield, who preached the sermon. He was a master in Israel, a man of great spiritual power. His discourse interested and edified all who heard it. He brought to us wise council and noble inspiration, and when in his own impressive manner he performed the solemn act of dedication, the heart of the congregation was stirred and all the people said 'Amen'."

Towards the close of the recent war, a Connecticut magazine prepared the following article for its own press, and it is quoted here as bringing this life-glimpse almost strictly down to date:

OLD STATE HOUSE REPRODUCED IN SOUTHERN HILLS

Brief Sketch of the Career of Former New Haven Resident Who Erected Among the Blue Ridge Mountains of Virginia A School House Modeled After the Structure that Stood so Long on the Green.

To reproduce in a strange land the building that meant home in one's "Ain Countree" is nothing new. Immigrants wearying for the sight of Loch Lomond or for a whif of smoke from a Kilkenny cot have done it before this; under the hands of a man with the Heimweh on him even that uncompromising institution, the New England farm-house, has a way of taking on unaccustomed lines and something of an air of foreign graciousness.

But to become so warmly attached to a public building, to a structure that can have none of the intimate associations that make home unforgetable, as to reproduce it years afterwards, line for line, with all the loving attention to detail with which one would copy the home hearth-place, there is an O'Henry twist of the unusual.

The man who did this once lived in New Haven. He is Rev. Wm. E. M. Todd, whom many residents of this city will probably remember. The building he reproduced was the old State House that stood not many years ago on the Green. And the site he chose for it was a natural depression in the Blue Ridge Mountains of Virginia, "On the trail of the Lonesome Pine," where feuds and romances, fairy-stones, (and at that time moonshine whiskey) and big apples flourished, as well as material for ballad makers, and in one instance, at least, nostalgic yearnings for the dignity and orderly grace of a New England town.

During the middle eighties, the "People's Mission" stood on Union Street, nearly opposite the grimy, old Union Station. Here were welcomed the human derelicts that then made the street an unsavory spot, and though it was before the day of the "social settlement," there was constructive work done there that would compare favorably with the record of the more pretentious institutions of today.

One of the workers at the Mission was a boy named Todd—William Todd. He was an enthusiastic young chap, somewhat of a mystic, preached as they use to preach in the olden days, with a vehemence and deadly earnestness such as the world now regards as out of tune with the times. But he had one quality which the genius preacher does not always possess—imagination.

These were the days when the old state house still loomed up in the heart of the city, and the boy, who often on Sunday afternoons spoke to a crowd of four or five hundred people at the southern portico, was fasinated by the long line of steps, the tall fluted columns and the whole aspect of a Greek Temple of the Golden Age set down in the trim expanse of a New England green. And when not long after he left New Haven, he carried with him a mental image of the old State House that was to stay with him for many years.

At that time, Mr. Todd was preparing for the ministry. From New Haven, he went to Virginia, and continued his studies for several years, spending his summer vacations on Menhaden fishing steamers going out from Boothbay Harbor, Boston, New London, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Norfolk, Cape Charles and a score of other ports ranging the ocean from off the Maine coast to the West Indies. In the meantime, he became a full-fledged marine engineer and was seeing service on the Job T. Wilson, the first vessel of that type ever launched, the Pauline Wilbur, the Starry Banner, the Bradley, the Goodale, the Daisy, the Isaac N. Vesey and the J. W. Hawkins. The last named was a great ship and was well manned, having a double crew. One morning these alert fellows, having a chance, caught before breakfast 500,000 menhaden. It took all day to load them. Later, it may be recalled, this vessel was purchased by the Cuban Junta and placed under the command of the Cuban Patriot, Gen. Calixto Garcia, in the service of Cuba Libra. She was unusually large and swift for a vessel of this class and easily converted into a filabustera or blockade runner.

Mr. Todd's career has been a versatile one. His sea going ventures including also time used "before the mast," first as an ordinary seaman, then as an able seaman, afterward as steward and from that up to second officer on the great black sloop "Rainbow" of the Rappahannock, the "Lila Dale" of the lower Chesapeake, the rakish, buoyant daring caraway pungy "Alice," Captain Cole, whose home was on the Patuxant river; the sailing merchantman "L. F. Hall" of Baltimore and the bold ocean rover and pineapple freighter, the old Staten Island "William McGee." This vessel went to the old Columbus port of San Salvador.

After leaving the fishing harvesters, he was chief of a ship of nine engines in U. S. construction service. About this time, completing his studies, he was ordained to the ministry in 1890, and since then has served in the churches throughout the country as evangelist, pastor and builder or supervising architect. Not long after his ordination, he was appointed postmaster of an important court-house town and port of entry, and did much "dry" campaigning in Alabama, Tennessee and Virginia, each state ultimately winning for prohibition by large majorities. Later he was at work in Iowa and Montana when they each voted "dry" by splendid margins.

It was during this period that he erected the building so well modeled after our State House. He had planned to build a school for the illiterate whites of that section, and when the question of design for the building came up, a happy inspiration struck him—the old State House on the green. This was a new departure for the Virginian mountain district, a gaunt wooden shack, foursquare to the winds, was the type of school building to which the people were accustomed, but Mr. Todd persisted in his purpose to do the highest best, and finally won the men of the mountains over to his views and enthusiasm arose so high and strong that they had the structure up in short order, after which new schoolhouses became quite the order of the day all over that part of the state.

The corner stone of this noble building was laid with Masonic ceremonies amid great rejoicing. Several thousand people being in attendance, and music was furnished by excellent brass and string bands made up of young native mountaineers. This band later numbered 175 players and attained a national reputation, being known far and near as a human pipe-organ. From time to time other buildings, seven in all, were erected and the rock, timber and lumber used in the construction of them all was furnished from the Virginian quarries and forests of the surrounding country. A steam saw and planing mill was set up on the campus—a tract of 100 acres where it worked early and late for about two years. Also steam and water grist mills were soon established, stone-masons were recruited, journeymen carpenters secured and the work went steadily forward to a grand finish in a little more than 30 months. A sojourner in the district sends the following description of Central College, Literary Institute and School of Music, as this group of schools was then called. It was early chartered and incorporated.

"Along the old Danville-Carroll Pike, not far from Carroll Court-house, where the Allen Clan, a few years ago shot up the court while in session, and near the head waters of the historic Dan river, is a natural bowl in the Blue Ridge Mountains, reaching from the famous Lover's Leap on the west, to the Bull Peak on the east. It is a mammoth depression, ten miles across the top and about a thousand feet deep, and through this runs the old pike. Its sides are covered with forests, small farms and orchards, and cottages overflowing with children. Suddenly one comes upon the College with its band stand on the roof and usually "Old Glory" flying from the flagstaff above. It tells its own story, a strong people realized a need and a loyal son of Virginia and Connecticut lived and worked there with them. During the first five years he rode something like 14,000 miles on horseback in the interest of this establishment. Of the results of his work with the institution, Dr. Richard S. Martin, member of the Board of Visitors, President of the State Medical Association and member of the Virginia House of Delegates, said at one of the Commencements: "In the lives of his students and in the hearts of our people, he has erected to himself a monument more enduring than either gold or marble."

The founder of this Central School and Armory—for it has its military academy—has often been invited into pulpits all along the east coast as well as throughout much of the interior, from the Pine Tree State in the far northeast to the most southern city of the nation, and musicians under his instruction have been called for from Seattle, Wash., thru the middle West to Washington, D. C. and south to Macon, Ga. In Key West, Fla., he was president of the Ministerial Association, (40 churches). His church was a colony of more than 400 families. A fine pipe organ was installed and they had the most delightful choir in all the orange land. Two of his men were members of the Legislature, many were merchants and several owned fleets of sponge ships. While resident there, he was speaker at a great state convention, Memorial Day orator for the G. A. R. and for the Four Hundredth Anniversary of the birth of Wesley, before the only English Wesleyan Church in the United States, a body of some 500 members, also located at Key West.

His Alabama people made his work among them a constant delight. The Mayor of Piedmont, Judge E. D. McClellan, one of his Elders, always kept open house for him and his family. At Anniston he was clerk of the City Ministerial Association (40 churches) and Judge (Chancelor) W. W. Whiteside, statesman, churchman and jurist, a widely beloved man was clerk of his session. Here he officiated at times with seven of the leading pulpits, gave a memorial to General Joseph Wheeler, was made a Royal Arch Mason and designed his ninth new church. Judge J. Marion Hare, of Fairview, Major E. S. Smith, at Argo, Esq. J. J. Freeman, of Mountainboro, Judge R. A. D. Dunlap and George Washington Whorton, at Gadsden were most valued friends who always worked with steady, sturdy faith and membership in the historic old church was multiplied by three. While here he was stated clerk of his Presbytery, elected Moderator and sent to the General Assembly. Gadsden was the first of the old iron towns in the heart of the "Old South", now a city of pretentious proportions and a county seat, on the famous Coosa river; and was always most prompt to ring true to every call of its ancient chivalry for the protection and advancement of its people. The name of Gen'l Nathan Bedford Forrest, founder of the true Ku Klux Klan (there was a false one) the invisible empire, the invisible brotherhood of the fiery cross, was here held in reverential affection. Many Todds have lived here, some coming direct from the old home across the sea.

On Dr. Todd's retiring from this field where he was also chaplain of the city Fire Department, chaplain A. F. & A. M. and prelate for the Knights Templar, his church inviting the co-operation of these organizations, planned an elaborate farewell meeting which was attended by a full house. The Fire Department Band was present and discoursed appropriate selections. Piano solos and duets were rendered by members of the congregation and addresses were given by Judge R. A. D. Dunlap, who spoke for the church, Judge James A. Bilbro, speaking on "Religion and Fraternity" and the minister who talked for "Life's Idealisms and Realisms." Mrs. Todd gave a reading, the band played, the choir and congregation worshiped with prayer and song and the whole audience united in tendering the pastor and his family a loving and affectionate farewell and in wishing them prosperity and success in all their future labors. The Rev. Todd was accepting a call to Omaha, Neb.

To mention the towns and cities in which Mr. Todd has spoken would be to list practically all the communities of any considerable size in the country. In Massachusetts, he has addressed congregations in Springfield, Brockton, Edgartown, Taunton and Fall River; in Rhode Island, Providence, Bristol, Green, Lafayette and Woonsocket; in Connecticut nearly 100 places including, Danielson, Tylerville, Taftville, Burrville, Plainville, Unionville, New Haven, Wallingford, Middle Haddam, Chester, Centerbrook, Danbury, Norwich, Cheshire, Mt. Carmel and Torrington; in New York, Albany, New Lebanon, New York City and Brooklyn; in Maryland, Harve-de Grace, Salisbury and Baltimore; More than seventy-five places in Virginia, including Charlottesville, Danville, Martinsville, Clarksville, Excelsoir Springs, Lynchburg, Newport News and Richmond; North Carolina at Greensboro, Danbury and Salisbury; Georgia at Atlanta, Macon and Savanah; in Alabama, Tennessee, Oklahoma and so on over the list of states. His most famous pulpit in the South was the old Circular Church of Charleston, a well endowed parish and a notable organization dating from 1678. His strong pulpit farthest north was First Church, London, Canada. Some of his interior pulpits have been at Zanesville, Cleveland, Chicago, many places in Iowa, Missouri, Kansas and Nebraska, including Kansas City, Omaha and Lincoln; Hot Springs, S. D.; Butte, Mont.; Lewiston, Idaho; Aberdeen, Wash.; Portland, Ore. where he had twelve war platforms, three of which were pulpits.

At the beginning of this century, Dr. Todd was in charge of an important parish on the western border of Connecticut and while here the membership increased, the church and grounds about it were improved and the congregation celebrated its 175th anniversary. The affair was given wide publicity at the time, and guests were present from Danbury, Pennsylvania, New York, Hartford and Boston. Plain, austere and puritanical in external simplicity, but cozy and cordial within, and in summer almost hidden by the foliage of surrounding trees, this church stands as a symbol of the faith which the forefathers of the congregation have followed on this same site for two centuries. The great French General Rochambeau once camped his army for weeks beside it. It bears the distinction of being nearer to the New York line than any other in the state and numbers among its stanch supporters, educators, members of the town board, business men and members of the Legislature.

Not long since the minister's work was again in the west and while located in Iowa—his wife's native state —his silver wedding was observed with the people of his parish and was the occasion of much unalloyed pleasure. A band of 40 pieces furnished most delightful music and the family were the grateful recipients of fifty silver gifts and fifty silver dollars, $25 and 25 gifts to each celebrant. It was Dec. 25th, and the church was filled with loving friends whose minds were alight with living memories of a personal past, sacred with tenderness and anxious kindness in the ways, cares and labors of growing family experiences in the home, in business and in society. The program and ceremonies were purely informal, after which dainty refreshments were served by three prairie nymphs, the Misses Neva Stockdale, Ruth M. Todd and Anne Tiedens, gowned in pink and blue who made everybody happy with their delightful and quaint liberalities and witty pleasantries. Back of the band on the wall was stretched a beautifully illuminated picture of Bethlehem, the Angel and the shepards, the wise men and the star, a great lithograph in oil 9 feet high and 27 feet long and suitable for both Christmas Eve and Christmas night. The band seemed in unusual good spirits and added much to the festivities of the occasion.

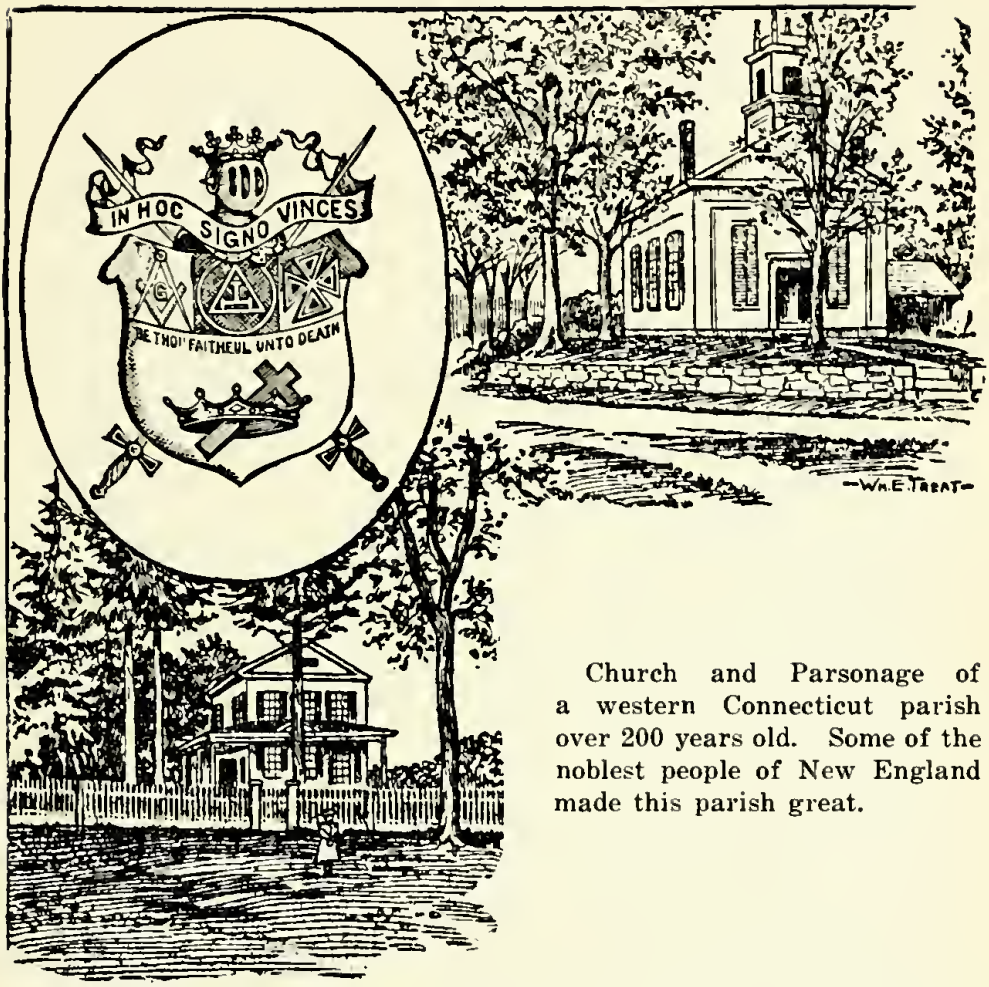
Among the many delightful and deeply appreciated gifts was a tall candle stick, suggesting the Bible figure of the true light in the church. This gift by the pastor of the Reformed Church, the Rev. Mr. G. Zindler and his daughter, touched very closely the earnest Christian motive of the pastor and Mrs. Todd. And of the many messages of the fraternal regard from many sections of the country the one given below, by the stated clerk of the Presbytery of Waterloo breathes the kindly spirit of all the others.

My garden blossoms best at Christmas time,
Untouched by wintry winds or clinging snow,
Because my flowers are loving Memories
That never die but grow, and grow, and grow.
And if, perchance, within that garden fair,
You'll walk with me and all its fragrance share,
For-get-me-nots of Heaven's serenest blue,
You'll find are blooming there, my friend, for you.



Church and Parsonage of a western Connecticut parish over 200 years old. Some of the noblest people of New England made this parish great.

The Masonic insignia is that of the great French General Rauchambeau who, during the war for independence, camped here with his army, for many weeks. The same insignia was worn by Lafayette, as well as by 54 of the 57 signers of the Declaration of Independence.

Dr. Todd is a member of the American Academy, American Geographical Society, Archaeological Institution of America, with classical schools at Rome, Athens and Jerusalem; American Historical Association, National Geographic Society, Educational Association of Virginia, Scout Commissioner, the National Municipal League, the League to enforce Peace, and one of the founders of the National Masonic Research Society. He has often spoken in the interests of Patriotism, Education and Religion in some thirty of the great cities and college centers of the country, and is also connected with the most significant movements of modern times in the church, the schools and with the masters of Political Science. He has been a hard student and has enjoyed the society of many of the most responsible leaders of inventive and sociological progress. His large stake is: he never forgets a friend, much less an enemy, and his work every where has been constructive.

Congratulations came also from His Honor The Mayor, and Mrs. William Dreyer, His Honor the Ex-Mayor, attorney, and Mrs. D. Voogd, the Rev. and Mrs. Wm. H. Roberts, LL. D., stated clerk of the Presbyterian General Assembly, and the Rev. Dr., and Mrs. Charles Herron, of Omaha Theological Seminary, who wrote: "When your band plays, the year of Jubilee has come, may it be a foretaste of the melody above."

Butte, Montana, the largest, richest and at that time, was the wickedest mining town in the world. Its status since then has been very greatly advanced. The state has voted "dry" and its other great vice has been radically abated. While resident pastor here, Dr. Todd's address in defense of the "Verity of the New Testament Story of the Trials of Jesus", given before the Montana Commandry of Knights Templar, of which order this minister is a member, was published in the city press and in bound form for circulation.

His pulpit work on the far western coast has been regarded as of unusual strength and by many has been warmly commended in both Oregon and Washington. Many distinguished guests attending his ministry, including the fraternities, commercial, military and other bodies. He did his war bit in a dozen different ways; in the camps, at ship furnishings, army supplies, as engineer, band master, time keeper, paymaster, foreman, storekeeper, postmaster and chaplain. The recruiting officer came into his home soliciting his service on special lines. His family in the meantime each doing their utmost to help Uncle Sam win his most laudible designs against the secularized and fanatical scientists of the age who were unerringly sealing in their swagging, savagery, their own well deserved death warrant and ultimately that of their empire and their government.

In the Appalachian mountains, from the Potomac to the Mississippi rivers dwell 3,000,000 people of the purest American blood. Five times their present numbers during the last 150 years have flooded from these giant hills into the throbbing life veins of the Nation and like a fierce artesian well have helped mightily to keep the great stream full and free. In the early sixties, when numbers were relatively much less, 80,000 enlisted in the Union service. It was given to such as these men to capture, single-handed, the largest bunch of the boldest Huns during the world-war, and our most notable public officials hasted to do them honor. Given the steady benefits of modern educational progress this remarkable people may enhance the mind, heart, life and initiative of our wonderful America, in the strongest application of its practical genius a hundred fold. The vast recesses of these mountains are mines of unrelenting spirit, common culture of a flexible granite quality that can scarcely be found anywhere else in the world. It is up to institutions like the above to find and utilize this measureless value of America's psychological wealth.

Professor Wm. E. Manning Todd was Trans-Mississippi Exposition City Preacher with Omaha First Church during the Spanish-American War; in Green Street Church, Chicago, during the worlds fair; with old Circular church Charleston, during the reunion of United Confederate Veterans—the Federal Gunboat Raleigh from which was fired the first shot at the Battle of Manilla Bay was guest of honor on this occasion—and this speaker was also with the First Church, London, Canada, a cathedral city, during the mobilization of troops for service in the Transvaal. He occupied, 1917-18, fifteen war pulpits, founded the college group mentioned above, sent fifty students to post graduate studies, prepared fifty more for scientific agriculture, graduated a hundred public school teachers and had more than a thousand boys in Uncle Sam's recent armies. Men of his Highland Battery attained renown. Two of his churches doubled in membership and three others trebled. He established ten pulpits, found fifteen men for the ministry and an entire city was organized into a single church. He is the practical pioneer of modern church unity, and in the co-operation of state and denominational college work.

His conservatory of music furnished musicians for the civic division of the 1912 Presidential Inaugural and for other great national functions. He designed and constructed twenty-five fine church properties, all of them excellent and some of them ample, impressive and dignified architecturally; beautifully harmonious within, and wholly and inclusively practical. Substantial and effective expressions of the best and most inviting themes in the active Christian thought of today, and many have united with the churches he has served. These prodigious labors, together with an unusual scholastic record—for he always carried class honors—have earned for him five degrees and fellowship in five learned societies. His commission as Captain hangs on his library wall and his appointment as chaplain in the great assembly room at the court-house. He has been moderator and stated clerk of presbytery, member of the General Assembly and participated in many difficult war activities, being connected, part of the time, with seven camps. He also helped furnish and supply 100 of the U. S. Merchant Marine.

His archaeological researches have promoted a keen advance for an intelligent concern in the work of the American Classical Schools at Rome, Athens and Jerusalem and he has active investments in the restoration of Palestine, Syria, Arabia, Armenia and the ancient dominion of the Calaphs. His philosophy declares "An age is dying in the East and that a new world will rise there." His book answering "New Testament Critics" received strong commendation and was given a wide circulation. He had ten speaking points in the heart of the city of Portland, Oregon, and his home was a rendezvous for both officers and privates during the entire period of the war. He often led the war-time bands and his work was in all of the northwest states. He was also called east on a number of special missions in the interest of both the church and the government.

Dr. Todd's work on the northwest coast has lately again been cordially referred to personally and in the public press, for its patriotic and educational value, for besides his church and camp work he had three war bands, and his university classes were a fine enrollment. A high salaried position was offered him and a chair in a great school, but his whole interest is absorbed in the church. To this spiritual enterprise he is wholly devoted and to this purpose his life is dedicated.

His pulpit in Greenfield, Indiana, is in a great building of twenty-five rooms fully equipped right down to the minute, and the character of his sermons has recently called again into his audiences the Veterans of the Grand Army, the Woman's Relief Corp, the American Legion and the Knights Templar. These last named worshipped with him on Easter Sunday when his sermon addressed to them was entitled: "Why the World Failed and Christianity Won in both the First and in the Twentieth Centuries." This Easter sermon was given a generous circulation in the daily and weekly press. The Armistice Day will never be forgotten—11th hour, 11th day, 11th month, 1918. He has recently added to his collection two great pictures: The Most Dramatic Moment in Four Centuries—General Allenby entering Jerusalem unarmed without firing a shot—ending forever misrule in the Holy City, Dec. 11, 1917. And the Reading of the Proclamation at David's Tower in four languages Christmas Day two years ago when General Allenby made to Christendom a present of recovered Jerusalem. These tremendous incidents made possible by the faith, sacrifice and work of the period, have started the music of the world to vibrating in a new way. And so we move ahead again toward the better excellence promised in God's book, into the morning ever dawning in the human conciousness.

Mrs. Todd has always been interested in school and in woman's work, teaching seven years before marriage and later in Alabama and Virginia, where she was principal of Central Academy and matron of the young ladies' dormitory. She is active with the W. C. T. U., the W. R. C., with the Woman's Federations and the Order of the Eastern Star. But her chief interest has been Missions. Always devoted to the church she has had opportunity to address the women of Massachusetts, Connecticut, Florida, Oklahoma, Kansas, Nebraska, Virginia, Montana, where in the city of Butte she was auditor of the Federated Woman's Clubs, and in Oregon where under the new suffrage law she was made a judge of election in the city of Portland. Being so steadily busy, her chief relaxation has been a good garden—both flower and vegetable—and an occasional good banquet. For twenty-five years this home has rarely ever been without a guest and much of the time as many as from five to fifty people. For much of this period the family scarcely ever sat down to a meal by themselves. And the banquets so much enjoyed have served on many important civic, educational, church and community occasions from a hundred to twenty-five hundred people and the mendicant never gets by her door without his hand-out. Both the garden and the banquet, together with her school, church and home duties have been and are to her a source of inexhaustable comfort and pleasure. Always fond of young people, young company and good, hearty, lively merriment, she has kept herself young, and now at fifty-three seems little above forty. So the gift of immortality early shows itself in the lives of those to try to exemplify the Todd motto—"To live well, is to have lived enough"—that is, to try to do your best.

2443. Ruth Miriam, b. Jan. 29, 1894, she is a college graduate and was athletic editor her senior year, is a member of the largest athletic clubs in America, has recently been elected as teacher of physical culture and English in two splendid High schools.

Ruth began life in a beautiful little villa by the banks of the Blue River at Blue Springs, Neb. and her arrival was heralded by the gift of a home, and half a car-load of supplies of all kinds of provisions that came over the Burlington Railroad—a bountiful and most generous consideration from her father's people throughout the state with whom he built three churches and for whom he was superintendent, editor and pastor-at-large.

Owing to pastor Todd's responding to so many calls, Ruth's schooling was advanced by the abilities of many teachers. Her High School studies, however, were taken in Gadsden, Alabama and Omaha, Nebraska, and her A. B. degree work was done at Southern Presbyterian College in North Carolina, and with Richmond's Woman's College, Richmond, Virginia; receiving therefor a five-year teacher's certificate from the state Board of Education. This certificate was renewed in 1920 for a six year period and she received in that same year a High School Life License with the State Board of Indiana. Ruth studied music all her school-life, having both private and public tutors, and has become proficient in piano, pipe-organ and band work. She also holds Iowa and Oregon State Teachers certificates, has had common and High School work in the four states and in the last named she was one of the most efficient and popular teachers residing at Portland, and was chosen to a High School position paying $150 per month. She has always been an amiable and fun loving girl, fond of athletics, horse-back riding, autoing and the classics in drill and military movement, and with her native and acquired abilities in modern educational activities she has become an allround and accomplished school woman.

RUTH AND HER HIGHLAND LASSIES

Her Presentations have given the greatest delight
And have been seen East, Mid-continent and on Western coast.

Ruth has personally drilled and successfully presented "monie a troup o' lassies to gie the 'Highland Flinge' before classical and critical audiences in the South, Middle-west and on the West coast, and all the way across it struck a popular chord everywhere. The "auld Scotch foke" say she even excells them in the "land o' the heather". Her lassies always make a hit and give their audiences more than anticipated pleasure. She has also presented many other forms of school and evening entertainment—and even now, Christmas time 1920, she is at work with 140 young people planning for the opening night for a new Gym and Atheneum soon to be dedicated in the city where she lives and is on the school Faculty. Her abilities on these lines are always in demand. She thoroughly appreciates the high moral value of physical culture and supervised athletics, and school patrons trust her fully. She has had some of the best audiences in America.

Ruth has state authorized Diplomas from the departments of Home Economics, Domestic Science and Physical Culture in The Virginia School of Pedagogy and has taught these branches with gratifying success. She has been Assistant Principal and Principal; and standardized one of her western schools. And as a High School or College teacher of English and History, she is unexcelled.

Socially she owns a wide circle of loyal friends in fifteen of the states, is a member of the Multnomah Club—which has the largest athletic membership of any in America and seems to live to serve and to be a joy to those about her. She was on the editorial staff at both her colleges, is active in church work and has often been a resourceful assistant in her father's active parish plans. She is beloved by all her students, and yet is one of the most careful of disciplinarians—this latter is not infrequently said to be a prominent Todd characteristic. Ruth's loftiest asset is: "that it pays to be courteous."

2444. John William Stover, b. Aug. 8, 1901, he also has lived in a dozen of the states, but received his earlier school training in Alabama, Nebraska and Virginia. He had a diploma from the Normal Grade or School of Pedagogy, at Central Academy and from the High School of Aplington, Iowa two months before he was fifteen years of age. He was then employed for two years part of the time in Iowa at garage and band work, then later with the office force of a great commercial and banking company at Butte, Montana, where sometimes with a reliable revolver in his pocket he would be sent through a crowded street, more or less alive with alert and powerful crooks to get a suit case full of money, frequently gold, but it might be either silver or currency. He did not always go alone, neither always on foot. But in a thronging and wicked city as Butte then was, where holdups were of daily occurence —two outlaws sometimes alone robbing as many as fifty people—the trip was always fraught with more or less thrill and danger. This city is 6000 feet up in the air (altitude) in Winter mighty frosty—forty below zero—and in Summer mighty hot. Life here is rich and tense and the people are often either mighty good or mighty bad. He was next engaged as private secretary in the main office with a similar concern in Portland, Oregon, where a part of his duties was collecting heavy accounts. It is said that his fullest days work on that line was collecting from several local firms—some of whom did not want to pay without a few weeks dickering and the using of every known form of banking subterfuge—$250,000. But he got it and felt that he had won for his office. And so the thrall and enthusiasm for honest big business began to awaken and expand in his own will and purpose. His next venture was as chief messenger with the U. S. Forrestry service, but feeling the need for larger earnings pressing him, he became one of Uncle Sam's steel ship outfitters at $125 a month, and entered Commercial High School for night study, majoring in stenography and typewriting. For war work, for he was not yet seventeen altho large for his age, he enlisted in "The Multnomah Guard," Portland's city war regiment of 1800 business and professional men. These men were regularly and thoroughly drilled, fully equipped and worked much of the time night and day at R. R. bridges, ship yards and elsewhere when needed. He was a leading musician in the regimental band of 120 pieces, before this he had been chief musician in Central Academy Military band. At other times he has played with various other bands throughout the country from Macon, Ga., to Seattle, Wash. He was Regimental Bugler, with the rank of Sergeant-in line, of the old Oregon Third Regiment, O. N. G. as orderly sergeant, for excellence as training instructor in S. A. T. C., and untiring devotion to every military duty he was given the full insignia of ex-service man, and is member of the Government vocational fraternity Chapter at his University. He was a Freshman at Reed College, Sophomore at University of Washington where he plays in the band and orchestra and is associate coxswain with the racing crews, which won the regatta this year, 1920, from the crews of the University of California. He is taking the new and strong advanced course in "Business Administration." He is fond of all school sports, hugely enjoys tennis, loves to sing with guitar and ukulele, a fine musician and can use nine instruments. He is much interested in the future of our country through the development and progress of the west coast, where he is a Junior in the University of Washington at Seattle. He has been active in the church ever since the age of six years.

Clifford Kirtland Todd[8], (Orrin K.[7], William[6], Simeon[5], Joel[4], Ithamar[3], Michael[2], Christopher[1]) married at Wallingford, Conn., Aug. 25, 1897, Elizabeth, daughter of Henry Lobb, the Rev. E. G. Richardson, pastor of the Methodist Church officiating.

Clifford K. Todd had in his nature two qualities not possessed in so large a degree by any others of these boys. He was liberal in his opinion, but conservative in his expression of them and as a consequence his quiet influence has steadily grown. He is progressive in his life—was among the first to own an automobile—and up-to-date in his engagements. He has been at the head of a department with the world famous R. Wallace Sons Mfg. Company for 30 years. This firm manufacture in all metals from tin to gold, and at present Mr. Todd has the great department of Nickel Silver flat ware. He has a pleasant, well located home and his personal fad is a collection of the original sources of the great religious foundations, as the Christian Bible, the Mohamedan Koran, the Pittikas of the Buddists, the Rig Vedas of the Brahmins, etc.

He is keenly alive with broad and generous sentiments, keeps posted on both local and world events and is a most thorough and ardent patriot. His high regard for New England and his home loving proclivities have kept him always near to his native heath, but this has been a gain to him in many respects, for the years of agreeable association with a continuously increasing circle of local acquaintance and friendship has doubtless realized for him the strong value of a steadily deepening affection, and a quiet growth of this strength into his own esteem for others, finds in this mutual confidence all that makes of living its true riches and intrinsic worth. He is one of the pillars of his age socially and industrially, and always has mixed with a great mass of men who have thought but little about it, but who trust him absolutely; and in his line of active planning his judgement is seldom questioned. With his family his religous connection is with the M. E. Church.

Whitney Alfred Todd[8], (Orrin K.[7], William[6], Simeon[5], Joel[4], Ithamar[3], Michael[2], Christopher[1]) born 1874, married Jan. 6, 1902, Zadelle Lucretia, daughter of Charles Billings Smith, at South Meriden, Conn.

He had a fair education but went to work early. He was a powerfully built fellow, and not fully comprehending the throbbing impulse of his varied ambitions was somewhat unusual in his activities to satisfy them.

At the age of eighteen he enlisted in K Company, 2nd Regiment C. N. G. and served 8 years. Enlisted in L Company, 1st Connecticut U. S. Volunteers in 1898 and served during the Spanish-American War. Enlisted in the 43rd U. S. Volunteers in 1899 and served two years in the Philippine Islands. Was honorably discharged from this service at San Francisco in July 1901. Enlisted in the 123rd Coast Artillery, U. S. Army in 1904. Transferred to 54th Company (Torpedo School of Submarine Defense) for one year course, and was then transferred to the 95th Torpedo Company as instructor in submarine torpedo work. It will be noted that Whit., as he was familiarly called, took several leaps across parts of the world in the service of the Government. All this work was full fraught with daring and danger, but that thought seemed to seldom come to him. He strongly desired to work out his own destiny on these lines and his always fine demonstrations covered a broad basis of time, space and action, and his work was commended. On his final discharge he located at Yalesville, Conn.—the populous suburb of the busy and somewhat aristocratic manufacturing and residence Borough of Wallingford.

Whitney Alfred, always retained his unusual physical vigor and was also the fortunate possessor of marvelous powers of endurance which enabled him to outserve almost any other man in many of the difficult army and war tasks assigned to him. His many sided activities seem to have given satisfaction for he was promoted to the rank of instructor both while in the Philippines and in the Submarine School at home. These patriotic jobs were full of intense interest to him and he extolls them as well worthy his time and strength. All these experiences he regards as not without a large reflex value to himself, and as also a veritable and fairly complete asset in many ways for his plans for the rest of his life.

Vocationally, he is connected with R. Wallace Son's cutlery department being responsible for quality of product and in charge of machines, tools and equipment, a position requiring experience of a peculiar kind, patience of very positive sort, alertness and speed of vision and action and special mental and mechanical abilities that are in constant demand. The work is important and the income commensurate. His careful attention to detail and ready accountability give satisfaction here, and his warm interest in home and community matters make him a jolly and sought for companion for any part of an unusual hour or two that needs a little spice injected into it. But he takes a deep and abiding interest in the welfare of his family and not much of his leisure finds him outside the threshold of his home except when they are with him. The family are active with the M. E. Church at Yalesville.

TRELOAR

Frances Adelaide Todd[8], (Orrin K.[7], William[6], Simeon[5], Joel[4], Ithamar[3], Michael[2], Christopher[1]) married Charles Elmer, son of John Treloar, who is an independent manufacturer of hardware at Yalesville, where they reside.

Mrs. Treloar spent all her years until 18 at school and had the special advantage of the State Normal at New Haven. She then spent a couple years in the home of her brother, the Rev. Wm. E. M. Todd, a former well known minister of New England, in Rhode Island and at Fall River, Mass. While at the latter place a large number of young people united with the church and among them she received the rite of Baptism and was admitted into the communion of Broadway—now Pilgrim—Congregational church of which her brother was then the installed pastor.

Spending some three more years with her mother, she was then married at the home, her brother, then in the west, returning expressly to officiate at the wedding. Many people in all the walks of life, from Watertown, North Haven, Meriden and Wallingford were in attendance.

Fannie, as she is called by her intimates, was always of a most amiable nature, winning the esteem and affection of a wide circle of those about her age in the three towns in which she had lived, Wallingford, Bristol, R. I. and Fall River, Mass., where she was a prime favorite with a lively group of literary and musical folk always attending her brother's church in that city. At home she was known as earnest, humble and accomplished in all that makes home life attractive. Thus she has been able to create an ideal resting place for her family.

Children:

I. Donald Nelson Todd; he made a fine record during the late world war in the manufacture of munitions at Bridgeport, Conn., where he had charge of a large shift of workers. His administration of this responsibility was well spoken of.

II. Robert Carlton Todd.

III. Howard Alton Todd.

1783

Allison DeWitt Todd[8], (Orrin K.[7], William[6], Simeon[5], Joel[4], Ithamar[3], Michael[2], Christopher[1]) born June 1879, in Wallingford, Conn., married in New Haven, Ct., June 30, 1913, Dorendo Helen, daughter of Charles Henry Beckett, of Middlefield, Conn.

Allison DeWitt Todd was born about three months after the sudden death of his father. He has lived practically all his life in Wallingford, Ct., except a brief period in the cities of Meriden and New Haven, Ct. His education included High School and much time spent in the study of music, mostly voice, although improving himself somewhat in the use of the pianoforte. He had fine opportunities for the study and drill in vocal culture, and as a boy sang for several years in the vested choir of St. Paul's Protestant Episcopal Church in Wallingford. This choir had an enviable reputation in general church circles and served a most beneficient purpose in the parish activities.

After mature study under talented experts, Max Trueman, of New York City, and Prof. Enrico Batelli, of New Haven, Ct., he sang for contract periods in the Congregational Church, of Wallingford; Center Congregational, of Meriden; Main St. Baptist, and St. Paul's Universalist, of that same city; First Baptist, of New Britain, and in the Central Presbyterian of Gadsden, Alabama, of which last named he also became a member, his older brother, the Rev. Wm. E. M. Todd, being pastor of that historic old body of worshipers, was humbly honored in officiating at his baptism and reception, the older, administrating for the youngest in this consecrated relation of such immortal significance. (In the Winter of 1899-00 this minister was called upon to administer the same sacred rite for the oldest friend of his boyhood, Mrs. Calvin Benham, of Mt. Carmel, Conn., then in her 88th year. In her girlhood Mrs. Benham had been a beautiful singer and for many years had given her sweet voice to the service of the choir of Cheshire Congregational Church). Allison DeWitt's splendid tenor has been heard in many churches and on many occasions since, and he still contributes, as he finds the time, to the frequent and urgent calls made upon him.

Much of his working days he has been connected with R. Wallace Son's, manufacturers of silverware, the largest tableware concern in the world. An immense percentage of the knives, forks and spoons used by our soldiers during the world-war were made by this well known and pioneer firm in many of these lines of goods, the practical demand for which steadily increases. Allison DeWitt is the only immediate descendant of Orrin Kirtland, who has been presented with a gold watch on the attainment of his majority, which irregularity was most cordially agreed to as without question in commemoration of the unusual circumstances attending his birth. In the Autumn of 1920 he became a Mason, Member of Compass Lodge No. 9 of his native town.

Mrs. Allison D. Todd was a school teacher, before her marriage, having taught one year in East Granby, Conn., and ten years in Yalesville, Ct., where their home is located. They are each active members of the Methodist Episcopal Church and are earnestly trying to make every effort count for the right as they use up the unfolding years. They are popular among a host of the younger families and their presence always brings an added joy into the social and community gatherings of their friends and neighbors.

Libanus McLoud Todd[9], (Asahel[8], Asahel[7], Jehiel[6], Stephen[5], Stephen[4], Samuel[3], Samuel[2], Christopher[1]) born July 14, 1862, married Nora Agnes Conway.

Libanus M. Todd is the President of The Todd Protectograph Company, of Rochester, N. Y., and inventor of the famous machines which bear his name. Of the achievements and the development of the company which was organized by he and his brother, George W. Todd, he writes the following on their twentieth anniversary.

Last week Charlie Tiefel and I took the car and drove to the old house on Gregory Street, where, twenty years ago, we built the first Protectograph. You may imagine that you have seen us right back where we started twenty years ago. Our hair is grayer and things have changed considerably during that time.

I could not help but think over the many interesting things that have occurred in this business since that sunny June day, twenty years ago, when we sat under the trees and worked out the problems that came to us on this first machine. Walter Todd, a lad of thirteen, was at that time building a boat, and having the usual good time that comes to boys of his age, and my own family had not yet begun to arrive. Little did we think in those days that in this brief period of time such an organization would be built up to carry the name "Protectograph" into all parts of the civilized world.

I can well remember the first year, during which time our output and sales totaled one hundred machines. During that and the period following there were many nights when I went to the express office with our day's output, three Protectographs in each hand, and shipped them out to our agents or customers.

The next Fall when George W. Todd went to the Banker's Convention at Richmond, and returned with orders for some twenty odd machines from various banks, we felt that we had a real incentive for working out improvements, and producing a larger number of machines. During the first year, we had worked out some ideas for improvements, but during the entire twenty years, the design and size of the machine has remained exactly as in the first ones manufactured. The first hundred machines were made for us under contract by another concern in Rochester, and we continued having our machines made by other parties for a considerable period.

When, after nearly four years of work and study, we produced nearly ten thousand machines, our agent, Mr. William Russell, located in New York City, who was our largest distributor at that time, came to visit us and told us that while he felt we would undoubtedly sell more machines, we had, he believed, reached the peak. This, as I recall, was the first time in Protectograph history that a territory was reported "sold out". At that time less than ten thousand machines had been made and sold.

Today, when our sales have climbed up to more than three-quarters of a million of the various devices which we manufacture, I feel that this check protecting business is still in its infancy. Mr. Russell lived to see his statement disproven, and to realize what a wonderful possibility there was in connection with the business.

In 1905 we moved into our own factory on West Main Street, and there we manufactured Protectograph number twenty-five thousand—the first in our own plant. The business continued to grow until in 1909, we completed the Protectograph plant at 1155 University Avenue. As the business developed and our advance advertising began to educate the public to the merits of the Protectograph, the capacity of this plant was gradually overtaxed. Charlie and I had, of course, long since ceased to direct the manufacture and shipment of each individual machine, having placed those matters in the hands of people well trained to handle them, while we were devoting ourselves to improvements in the line.

With the advent of the Protectograph Check Writer in the fall of 1913, even our model factory, designed to take care of the Protectograph business indefinitely, was found to be inadequate, so the presnt plant was purchased, and we moved into it over night, at the same time keeping up production on the Protectograph Check Writers, so that the insistent demands of our customers might be met. Then in another year came the crowning glory of the Protectograph System—Protod, and the Indemnity Bond.

Now our twentieth year has begun, there is peace and prosperity in the world, the Protod baby has developed into a lusty youngster, and a majority of the Banks and business houses of this country are using the Protectograph System.

This, however, is not the end. It is the beginning. As I look back over the twenty years, I realize that I little dreamed that our business would require a plant like the present one, with nearly one thousand people earning their livelihood in the factory and on the sales force, as a result of the development of the Protectograph.

Mr. Charles G. Tiefel, who is one of the directors of the Todd Protectograph Company, tells something as to the actual beginnings of the Protectograph. He says,

"One day in June 1899, Mr. Libanus M. Todd asked me to meet him to help him with some drawings of a check protecting machine. Well do I remember that day of twenty years ago. We went out under the apple tree, and fixed up a table to make our drawings on. While thus at work, Mr. Todd reached over and took a big round inkwell that we had brought out to hold the papers down, as a paper weight, and laid it in the middle of a piece of drawing paper, then took his pencil and drew a circle around that old inkwell to show the shape of the dial of the new machine."

That, according to Mr. Tiefel, was the actual beginning of a business which has grown to be the largest in the check protection industry, a business which from the most humble of beginnings has attained a proud and honorable place among the office appliance manufacturers of the United States, a business which, during the twentieth year of its existence will probably mount to nearly three millions of dollars.

For two weeks Mr. Todd and Mr. Tiefel worked out there under the tree, making the drawings; then with the design completed, and reduced to paper, Charles moved inside to the woodshed workshop in which he continued the work of the first protectograph, by actually building the machine under the direction of the inventor, Mr. Libanus M. Todd, himself.

The first model protectograph was fashioned from wood and metal patterns and the machine itself was nickel plated all over and had a wooden base. Later on it was decided that the machine should have a "treatment" of black enamel, and the nickel finish was then abandoned, except for the trimmings. The first machines were not furnished with an ink supply roll and it was necessary to "pry" the bottom off and "paint" the ink on the roll when the original ink supply became exausted from continued use. "In those days we didn't think much about reinking the machine because we really thought the ink would last as long as the machine themselves," said Mr. Tiefel.

Mr. T. J. Gildea, of Wisconsin, says as to the achievements of George W., and Libanus M. Todd, "I can't but wonder at the growth, magnitude, and development of an enterprise that promised so little twenty short years ago. It seems almost miraculous, and yet there isn't a thing about it that has the suspicion of the supernatural. The credit for the success of the Todd industry must be given to the genius who conceived the idea of the protectograph, and with it revolutioned the principle of check protection the world over. I have reference to Mr. George W. Todd.

That credit being properly placed, I am not unmindful of the fact that there is another genius who is entitled to an equal credit with his enterprising brother. I have reference this time to Libanus M. Todd, who not only developed the protectograph, but gave us the world's greatest and best Check Writer, an instrument having many imitators, but no rival, no peer."

George W. Todd and Libanus M. Todd are typically self-made and self-reliant men, architects of their own business plan and fortune, and eminently successful, due to a progressive spirit, and strict attention to business that has characterized them, and a reputation for honesty well and fairly won.

George W. and Libanus M. Todd began their business career when young. Inexperienced, without assistance, with little or no encouragement, under disheartening conditions, with many hours of anxious study and with perseverance unusual and a determination to succeed, can now after twenty years share satisfied fruition; and well they deserve it. They are looking forward to the future with optimism believing that the biggest success is still ahead of the protectograph, and as evidence of this confidence, they are celebrating the twentieth anniversary by enlarging several of the factory departments, ordering more new equipment than the first shop contained from cellar to loft.

Mr. Todd was born in Michigan, in 1854, and when only two months old his parents arrived in Buchanan County, Iowa. He resided with his parents on the farm, attending the common schools winters until he was twenty-one years old when he attended the Iowa State University and in 1876 graduated from the law department of that institution. After graduation and admission to the bar in 1876, he married Julia E. Hovey. In 1878 he and his wife moved to Kansas and while there he was city attorney of Rosedale for four years. Soon after reaching Kansas, he engaged in the practice of his profession in Stockton, but did not continue active in that field, turning his attention to the real-estate business, in which he continued for four years. He then moved to Hiawatha, Kansas, where he practiced law and was engaged in the real-estate business for six years. He next moved to Kansas City, Kansas, where he followed his profession for five years, and in 1896 he returned to Iowa, engaging in the practice of the law in Independence, where he later became city attorney which office he held for four years and then he was elected Mayor which office he held for two years and since that time for the last four years, he was city attorney again.

In his early life he was a Republican but for the last few years he has gone over to the Democratic party. However, he believes that the party should not be considered in the consideration of questions concerning which the interest of the people demand action, or in other words, he believes that party should not at all times be the paramount issue.

He has held the office of president of the Buchanan County Fair Association.

He is the fourth generation to have owned the place and the fifth to have lived upon it. The original farm was bequeathed to his great-grandfather, John Root, by the latter's grandfather, Joseph Root, of Northampton, Mass., the deed of conveyance dated in 1802 being in the possession of the subject of this sketch. Since then a small portion of the original farm has been sold off, but later other acres have been bought on so the farm is larger than in the beginning.

In 1902, becoming somewhat dissatisfied with farming he secured a position as a clerk in the Northampton post office, receiving his permanent appointment July 1, 1903. Within the next ten months he decided to buy the old farm and took possession the following April, resigning his position in the office.

Dr. Elbert S. Todd, was the seventh son of Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Todd, who were sturdy Methodists of an early day, and pioneers in the new state of Michigan. He was born on a farm near Adrian, and early showed fondness for school and books.

By the time he had finished the district school, his father had decided that he could never make a farmer of this boy, so moved into the growing city of Adrian, in order to give his promising son better educational advantages. There he graduated with honor from the Adrian College—Rev. Asa Mahan, president.

During his college days, when about sixteen years of age, he gave his heart to God, and united with the Methodist church, and was soon made leader of "The Young People's Meeting"—before the day of Epworth Leagues.

He was a successful leader, and held the position until, having decided to prepare himself for the ministry, he went to the Garrett Biblical Institute at Evanston, Ill. After his graduation, he went to the Union Theological Seminary of New York City and finished his studies there. While in New York he became interested in China, as a mission field, and decided to take his young bride and go as a missionary to that far away land. September 21, 1867, he left his home and native land, and on arriving in China was stationed at Kiu Kiang, where he remained until, owing to the condition of his wife's health, the doctors ordered him to take her and the young son—born in China—back to the home land.

They remained in California, and he joined the California Conference, being sent first to the Bush St. (Now California St.) Church, San Francisco, then to First Church, San Jose, next to Napa, then back to Grace M. E., San Francisco, and to First Church, Oakland. From there he transfered to Sixty-first St. Church, New York City, and then to Grace M. E., Church, Baltimore, for five years; Hamline Church, Washington, D. C., five years; Strawbridge Church, Baltimore, five years, and Frederick City, Maryland.

He has written some books, and has taken two European trips, and now has retired from the active ministry, and is living at Hollywood, Md., though still a member of the Baltimore Conference.

At their pleasant little bungalow home in Hollywood, they now have a religious service every Sabbath evening, for the neighborhood. Some who are not in the habit of attending church, and those of different denominations all meet together and enjoy a little informal evening of worship. So he is still doing the Master's work.

Chan Kiu Sing, the pastor of our Chinese M. E. Mission, still tells of the first Christian sermon he ever heard, which was preached by Dr. Todd, in the San Jose M. E. church.

The death of Samuel S. Todd occurred at his home in Toddsville, (N. Y.,) on Tuesday afternoon, May 10, 1921, in the 97th year of his age. Lacking but three years and a half of one hundred, Mr. Todd was probably the oldest resident of Otsego County. Furthermore, he was born in the neighborhood where he died and had always lived. Staunch in his Americanism and resembling somewhat in personal appearance the character of "Uncle Sam", he was known and referred to by that affectionate title by his neighbors and many friends. Possessing a retentive memory and being naturally of a genial and companionable disposition, it was a pleasure at all times to converse with him in regard to the early days of Toddsville and of this locality. He formed a connecting link back to the days of the pioneers, through his father and grandfather.

The writer called upon "Uncle Sam" about three weeks before his death. Bent with the infirmities of age, the old man said he was expecting the summons at any moment and was ready for it. On previous visits, Mr. Todd had expressed the determination to live to be a hundred, but this time, having passed through a very trying winter, he did not wish, he said, to go through another one.

He had resided in his late home thirty-one years. Since the death of his wife in 1899, his daughter, Miss Florence, has kept the home and cared for her father.

Mr. Todd was christened in the Presbyterian church in infancy and has always been a member of that church. A staunch Democrat he was for many years a Justice of the Peace in the town of Hartwick. Engaged for many years with the late Rufus Steere as salesman of cotton goods he was for a long time in the height of the industry, a familiar figure in the surrounding countries, making long trips with team and wagon, exchanging cotton cloth for the produce and merchandise of established customers. Since the close of the industry locally he has retired from active business, caring for his garden up until last fall.

Taken from Freeman's Journal of Cooperstown, N. Y.

Of his six children, five were living at the time of his death, namely, Mrs. Martha Gaylord and Fred, of Oneonta, Glenn, of Little Falls, and Mrs. James E. Almy and Miss Florence, of Toddsville.

In 1804, Jehiel Todd and his family consisting of his wife and sons, Lemuel, (then married) Ira, Caleb, Asahel, Zerah, and Bethel and daughters, Sally Todd, (Carr) and Polly Todd, (Crandall) came from Wallingford, Conn., the home of this Todd family for three generations.

Jehiel Todd and his son, Lemuel, purchased the "Tubbs patent" from Judge Cooper of Cooperstown, N. Y., consisting of a tract of 300 acres of land on both sides of Oak Creek at the present site of Toddsville, (N. Y.) including the water power. The first house was erected by Mr. Tubbs in 1795 and is now, 1921, owned by Mrs. Mary Clapsaddle. The Todd families occupied this house until 1805, when Jehiel Todd erected and occupied the house now owned and occupied by Frank Peck. Lemuel Todd and his son Samuel S. Todd owning and occupying the "Tubbs house" until its purchase by the late Dr. Clapsaddle several years ago.

The first mill was a grist mill built by Mr. Tubbs and improved by the Todds, who soon after they arrived also built on the Hartwick side, a woolen mill, and on the Otsego side, a saw mill and paper mill near the south end of the present paper mill. This paper mill was three times burned and rebuilt and operated by the Todd family until 1855. The first store was kept by Lemuel Todd in a building between the houses now, 1921, owned by Mrs. Clapsaddle and Michael Cleary. Zerah Todd ran a store, bookbinding and printing plant in connection with the woolen mill in the house now known as the "Old Dr. Almy House". The first and only hotel was built in about 1827 by Caleb Todd on its present site.

The Union Cotton Mill Company, purchased of Jehiel and Lemuel Todd about 1810, the farm property known as the factory property and built a wooden building and operated a cotton spinning factory there until 1828 when the stone building was erected and operated by various companies and proprietors until 1897.

The country, in revolutionary times, was served by Jehiel Todd who was a "Minute Man". He was at the burning of Danbury by the British in 1777, and at the plundering of New Haven by General Tryon.

Taken from Freeman's Journal of Cooperstown, N. Y.

For the ancestry of Jehiel Todd see page 139.

Since writing the sketch of Christopher Todd, there has been called to the editor's attention that there may be a possible question as to just which ship he took passage on and which company he was associated with. In the sketch as written it is stated that he came to this country on the Hector with Mr. John Davenport's company which set sail from London. This may be true, for John Fiske states in "The Beginnings of New England" that Davenport "in concert with Eaton (Theophilus) organized a scheme of emigration that included men from Yorkshire, Hertfordshire and Kent", and as Pontefract is situated in Yorkshire, he may have been one of these men. On the other hand, Christopher Todd may have sailed from Hull, for in the "History of New Haven Colony", Edward E. Atwater, the author, states that "Ezekiel Rogers, a minister of high standing in Yorkshire, having embarked at Hull on the Humber, with a company who personally knew him and desired to enjoy his ministry, arrived in Boston late in the summer 1638.

From this account it seems that through the representations of Davenport and Eaton, Rogers and his followers came to an agreement whereby they were to remove to New Haven and some of them started for that colony immediately. They went by water and encountered a heavy storm during which they were cast upon a sand bar where they remained until the next high tide. They were two weeks on the way. A full account may be found in the above mentioned history on pages 81-83.

With which of the two companies Christopher came to this country the editor does not know positively. Both of them were composed of a very desirable people, containing men of education, means and influence and were gladly welcomed on their arrival.
